Faculty Senate to meet Monday

By MARYBETH ROHSNER
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate may investigate Texas A&M's business holdings in white-controlled South Africa if the Faculty Senate adopts a resolution on Monday providing for exploration of divestiture.

Faculty Senator Chester Dunning, acting for the Liberal Arts caucus, has requested that a temporary committee gather information on the possibility of divestiture to present to the Faculty Senate and, eventually, the Board of Regents.

Dunning estimates the University's holdings in South Africa total 1 to 2 percent of A&M's investments.

The Faculty Senate will hear committee reports on a 32-hour core curriculum and a new method of selection of department heads, but senate Speaker Jaan Laane said the body will not vote on the proposals this month. He said he hopes the plan will be submitted for a vote in the January meeting.

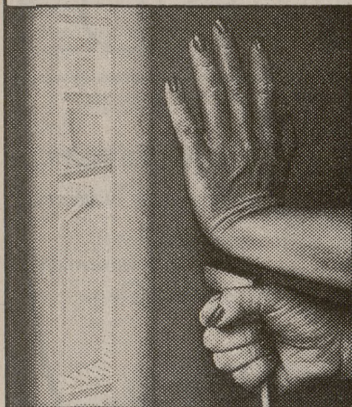

The senate also will hear a report from the status of women at A&M subcommittee.

In other business, the senate will vote on new courses, course changes and withdrawals in the graduate undergraduate curriculums.

Undergraduate courses that will be withdrawn include: English Writing Lab, Mechanical Engineering 322, Materials Laboratory, Mechanical Engineering 468, Metallurgy of Processes and Physical Education 306, Sports Officiating II.

The meeting will begin at 4 p.m. in 601 Rudder.

5 MILLION AMERICANS ARE LOOKING IN THE WRONG PLACE FOR HELP.

Do you go to the refrigerator even though you're not really hungry? Do you keep eating long after you're full?

Chances are, your insatiable hunger is for something more than food.

You could be one of the millions of people who use food to fill an emptiness inside. A feeling of frustration. Or loneliness.

Yet the more you eat, the lonelier and more unhappy you become. It's a vicious cycle. But it's not your fault.

It's a disease called Bulimia or Bulimarexia. No one can recover by themselves. Will-power doesn't help. Dieting and pills only make the problem worse. Even therapy isn't always successful.

Ours is one of the nation's leading eating disorder programs. It's successful because we treat our patients' physical, social, spiritual, and psychological needs. And we help them to recover in an atmosphere of warmth and caring.

Call us. We understand the pain and frustration you're feeling.

We know what you're going through.

- Yes No
- Do you eat without being hungry?
 - Do you spend most of your time thinking about food?
 - Do you find eating soothes your problems?
 - Do you anticipate being alone so you can eat?
 - Do you eat normally around others, but binge later to make up for it?
 - Do you feel guilty after bingeing?
 - Do you never seem to get anything accomplished because your day was consumed by food?
 - Do you feel no one understands?

If you answer yes to three or more of the above you are probably addicted to food, or well on your way to becoming addicted.
