Selected TDC inmates to get Christmas furlough

Associated Press
HOUSTON — Texas prison inmate Steve Duplantis spent last Christmas behind bars, but this holiday season will be different. Duplantis will be the guest of a Houston family taking part in a pilot program that is intended to help rehabilitate prisoners through Christ. "We hope to strengthen the inmates by showing them that we care," said Ed Williamson, president of Prison Fellowship, a non-profit, service-oriented organization. Williamson said the aim of the group is to teach prisoners to use their new-found faith as the basis for a better life. Duplantis, 27, was sent to prison in 1975 on a robbery conviction. He was released, but sent back to prison following a burglary conviction in 1983. All of the inmates chosen to take part in the five-day furlough are active participants in religious activities at their prison units. Each is a prison trustee, a status that affords them with more responsibility than is given to regular prisoners. During their leave, inmates will be kept busy with a full schedule of activities sponsored by area churches. Most of their time will be spent in bible studies and discipline classes, Williamson said. "These men will resemble families are like," said Williamson. Rust, who along with his wife, David, have been active in the ministry for about 10 years. To maintain proper order within the prison units, inmates who did not learn of their furlough last week, Williamson said.
