COLLEGE STATION, TEXAS

TI's CS business to close, move to Austin in '86

DALLAS — The College Station Texas Instruments plant, which assembles TI's professional computers, will be closed and the operation relocated in Austin as part of the company's even tighter cost controls being implemented in 1986.

The chief executive officer of TI, the semiconductor maker that closed 1985 with a loss of almost $120 million, paints a grim picture of 1986.

Jerry Junkins, president and chief executive officer, told The Dallas Morning News he sees no immediate return to profitability for the com-pany and said, "We are taking a conservative approach at this time until

In an interview published in The News' Sunday editions, Junkins, who replaced J. Fred Bucy as chief executive officer last May, said the company must scrutinize all aspects of its Junkins and other top officials said there will be detailed, ongoing reviews of all operations. Although the company last year cut some 10,000 jobs worldwide, more layoffs are not being ruled out. The job cutbacks follow a period of euphoria in the computer business in 1983 and 1984 when TI and other companies added to their payrolls and expanded operations.

But sales of personal computers slowed in mid-1984 and Japanese semiconductor companies began selling their chips in the United States at prices below their manufac-

In addition, the company recently announced it is suing eight Japanese and one Korean firm for alleged patent infringement, although those companies are TI customers.

Junkins said the company simply wants to be more assertive in the pat-

"We are filing suit against companies that comprise a large percentage of our business in Japan. .," Junkins said. "How risky will it be?
My personal opinion is there may be some problem but that they will look at it in the broader spectrum and not at it in the broader spectrum and not in the short term.'

The College Station plant will be-come part of the company's biggest money-losers, the Austin-based Data Systems Group, which manufactures personal computers.

Last year TI began cutting costs by $70 million and consolidated four

The College Station move is the first. The second is the consolidation of the terminals and peripherals operations in Temple with TI's House ton plant put on the block for sale, Junkins said.

Meanwhile, officials have high hopes for TI's profitable defense electronics business, which has the lucrative HARM missile contract. Sales in defense electronics were up slightly in 1985 over 1984 and TI of-ficials predict a "substantial" backlog increase in 1985, giving the com-pany a chance to resume its long-term growth.

White, Clements will pay fees, file for primaries today

AUSTIN — Monday is the final day to file for the May primaries, and Gov. Mark White and former Gov. Bill Clements say they'll beat the deadline.

The incumbent Democrat and the Republican he beat in 1982 have planned to pay their fees and fill out the forms Monday. Clements joins U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock as the major GOP contend-

White will face what appears to be minor opposition in the Democratic

At Saturday's State Democratic Executive Committee meeting, White made it clear he's looking to

"We don't have anything new the same old fight Democrats have been fighting forever and ever. We're still fighting ignorance and superstition.

While White was talking 1986, the Democratic committee members spent part of Saturday talking 1988.

The committee unanimously backed Houston's bid to host the 1988 Democratic National Conven-

"We think we have the people. We think we have the climate. We know we have the Democrats," said Clintine Cashion of Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire's staff.

mittee member Terry Bonds of Channelview complained that Hous-ton's new George R. Brown Conven-tion Center includes foreign steel.

Bonds is an international representative for the United Steelworkers Union.

"I hope in the future our government agencies do a better job of seeing whatever we build with our tax-payers' dollars is built with steel made in this country," he said.

Bonds voted for the Houston resolution despite complaining that more than 6,000 Houston-area steelworkers have lost their jobs in the past few years — many of them because of imported steel.
State Democratic Chairman Bob

Slagle said Atlanta, New Orleans and Washington also are expected to which can bring millions of dollars to the host city. National party officials will pick a site this summer, Slagle said.

Dallas hosted the Republican National Convention in 1984. Houston has hosted one national convention

— the 1928 meeting at which Democrats picked Al Smith as their presidential candidate. Smith lost to Republican Herbert Hoover. Houston's new downtown convention center is scheduled for completion in September 1987. It will hold 18,000 people and offer 500,000 square feet of space.
