

MSC Council makes selections for executive vice presidents

By JEANNE ISENBERG
Staff Writer

The MSC Council selected two executive vice presidents and 10 MSC committee chairmen for the 1986-87 council Monday night during the second slate of its officer elections.

Perry Eichor, a sophomore accounting major, was chosen as the executive vice president for administration. He will coordinate the activities of the vice presidents of finance and operations. Eichor is presently the vice president of finance for the council.

Katie Shuman, a senior political science major, was selected as the executive vice president for marketing and personnel, and will coordinate the vice presidents for development, public relations and student development. Shuman is presently the chairman of MSC Political Forum.

Ten committee chairmen out of 28 were also selected at the meeting, including those for MSC OPAS, MSC Hospitality and MSC Wiley Lecture Series.

Two nominating sessions remain for the MSC leadership positions: those for selections of the vice presidents and directors at the council meeting Feb. 24, and those for selections of any remaining unfilled positions March 10.

In other council news, the 1986-1987 budgets for the MSC committees, facilities and services were given final approval. The overall budget for the year is set at $3.01 million, MSC Council President Denis Davis said, up from about $2.9 million last year. Eichor said student service fee allocations for the MSC rose 7.1 percent this year.

The five-year master plan for the MSC was distributed to council members at the meeting for review, and it will come up for discussion and approval at the next meeting in two weeks.

This plan outlines the long-term goals of the MSC, and Davis said the statistics in the plan look at where the council has been in relation to its goals, where it is now and where it's headed.

Old skeleton unearthed, found intact

Associated Press

AUSTIN — An intact human skeleton that might be 4,500 years old has been unearthed from an Indian burial ground found in Williamson County.

According to Alton Briggs, a private archeological consultant who excavated the skeleton, the burial ground, which also has yielded less complete human remains, is part of a large site that appears to have been inhabited off and on for 7,000 years.

Arrow points, stone tools, shell ornaments and other artifacts have been found at the site, only a small part of which has been excavated.

"This is really a major aboriginal site," said Briggs, who owns Lone Star Archeological Services of Georgetown.

"It was not uncommon to find such sites in Texas 40 or 50 years ago but they are much more rarely encountered today. I can't tell you how good this site really is. It's startling to find so much. It's a regular supermarket," he said.

The site is east of Round Rock in a gently rolling area that used to be oat fields and horse barns but is now part of a residential subdivision.

The initial discovery was made in the summer of 1984 but it was kept quiet until now because of concern about looters, said Carol Klingemann, one of the developers of the subdivision.

The site is near Brusky Creek, about 20 miles downstream from where a 9,000 year-old skeleton nicknamed the Leanderthal Lady was found by state archeologists in late 1982.

Briggs said the site in the subdivision is not as old as the highway site, but is important because of its size and the wealth of material preserved in excellent condition.

He said no structures have been found but refuse heaps and stone cooking hearths at least 5 feet deep indicated the area may have been a long-popular stopping place for groups of Indians as they made seasonal journeys for food.

In Advance Commission to offer SSG election proposals

By FRANK SMITH
Staff Writer

The Student Government Election Commission will present proposals for times, dates and polling sites for spring elections to the Student Senate Wednesday night.

The Senate also will hear the first readings of three new bills.

Alan Moore, election co-commissioner, last week said one of the commission's proposals recommends that this spring's elections be conducted on one day instead of two.

He said a one-day election would provide an opportunity to conduct an efficient election while reducing the time in which misdeeds could occur. He added that the commission will propose that a central voting site be available for students from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on election day to help accommodate students who may not have been on campus during regular daytime voting hours.

The three new bills to be introduced to the Senate Wednesday include one which calls for the re-appointment of the Senate.

Another recommends the construction of outdoor campus directories similar to those found in shopping malls.

The third bill recommends that exam essentials — test forms, pencils and blue books — be available for sale at the Sterling C. Evans Library.

Psychology department will move to Physics Building

By LINDA K. SIPPOLA

Rapid increase in enrollment is a major reason the Texas A&M Board of Regents decided to renovate the Physics Building for the psychology department, says Moffatt, chief architect.

Dr. Paul Wellman, assistant professor of psychology, says the department's undergraduate enrollment increased about 65 percent in 1981 to 1985.

The department has projected the undergraduate enrollment to be out 900 in 1990, Wellman says. Present enrollment is about 750 to Space limitations and inadequate research facilities are straining the department's ability to meet commitments for currently funded research, Wellman says.

According to Wellman, "the nice thing about the new building is it gives us the space we need."

Adams says construction is scheduled to begin April 1987, after the physics department moves into the new Engineering-Physics Building. The project is expected to be completed by July 1988, he says, and is estimated to cost $4.5 million.

Renovation plans include gutting the entire building and re-building the interior, Adams says.

The area adjacent to the Physics Building also will look much better when the construction is complete, he says, as the cost of landscaping the area and installing a watering system is built into the cost of the project.

Also built into the cost estimation is a special conditions item to cover any unexpected findings once construction begins, he says, which is particularly important in a building as old as the Physics building.

8 ways to get a man to ask you out again.

1. When he mentions "The Bears," know they're from Chicago.
2. Seem unimpressed when he tells you he scored a hat trick in the third period.
3. Take his word for it when he tells you that 1984 was a very good year for Chardonnays.
4. Laugh at his jokes, even when he forgets the punch lines.
5. Avoid, at all costs, letting him see you reapply your lipstick.
6. Order something more exotic than a white wine spritzer.
7. Compliment him on his taste in colors, even if he arrives in jeans and a T-shirt.
8. Tell him you'd ask him up for a Suisse Mocha, but you only do that on second dates.
