Media center renting equipment at A&M

By KIM WALTERS Reporter

The Harrington Media Center rents all the video and audio equipment a student might need to be-come the hottest thing in Hollywood or the life of the party in College Station

Larry Linton, an electronic technician in charge of the media center, said, "We've got different types of video equipment people want to rent." "We have video cameras, slide projectors, VHSs, Betas, filmstrip projectors and a numerous amount of other stuff," he said.

"All a student needs to do is give us his ID number and pay to rent the equipment," he said.

Linton said the rental price of the video equipment varies with each machine.

The media center rents the various pieces of equipment on a day-by-day basis.

Price lists of the rental rates for the equipment are available in the center in 109 Harrington.

Linton said he came up with the concept of a media center 12 years

"I knew students needed equip-ment to rent for class projects and through word of mouth."

other things," he said. "But they had nowhere to go. "So I thought having a place on campus would be a good thing." Linton said teachers also benefit from having a media center on the

A&M campus. Teachers are the only ones exempt from the charges," he said.

"They use the equipment for classroom teachings or to aid them in lectures.

People who think they can keep the equipment out indefinitely better beware, he said.

Linton said more people are using the media center each year so he has to keep hiring more staff. He said the University has backed the media center since the beginning. "We had little equipment to rent when we started, but we kept getting more and more," Linton said.

He said he wants to get another editing machine as soon as he possibly can.

He said even though the center does not advertise, business is still good.

'The only thing we've sent out are information sheets listing our prices and our rules," Linton said. "Most people learn about us

HOUSTON - Sen. Phil Gramm said Monday that while a threejudge federal panel has thrown out part of his Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law, he's confident it will succeed because of other provisions in the measure.

'Legal counsel for the Senate feels optimistic that we can reverse this decision in the Supreme Court," Gramm said in a speech to the Hous-ton Club. "Whether we can or can't, I believe we can make this work.

I believe we can make this work." AUSTIN — Phonograph records have been essential to the music education of a generation of listeners and to the careers of most wellknown musicians.

In 1981, Olga Buth, University of Texas music librarian, had the idea of creating a sound archive. The idea gained support, and Dr. Karl Miller was hired in 1983 to head the Historical Music Recordings Collection.

In its three years of existence, the collection has amassed more than of its kind in the Southwest," he said. 70,000 holdings and includes cylin-ders, piano rolls and 16-inch tranings made using most of the varied methods that have been developed and abandoned during more than a century of sound reproduction.

Miller, who has a doctorate in composition has taught at North Texas State University and the University of Arizona and is an avid collector of contemporary orchestral music and film scores as well as science fiction and horror movies.
