Falling container kills A&M building worker

By BRIAN PEARSON
Senior Staff Writer

A man was killed Monday morning as a result of an accident at a Texas A&M construction site.

Robert C. Lewis, 29, a resident of College Station, was killed instantly at the new chemistry building site when a metal acetylene container, weighing between 50 and 75 pounds, fell about five stories and hit him on the head.

Lewis was a construction worker at the site, which is located at the corner of Spence and Ross streets.

Bob Wiatt, director of security and traffic at A&M, said the accident happened as a crane was about to take acetylene containers from the fifth floor and lower them to the ground.

"They (construction workers) were in the process of putting the container on the lift and somehow it slipped off," Wiatt said.

He said Lewis, who was wearing a construction helmet at the time, was standing on the ground when he was hit.

Lewis, who lived in trailer 17 at 201 Krenek Tap, was taken to Memorial Funeral Chapel in Bryan.

Workers at the construction site were sent home for the rest of the day.

Man required to testify against sister-in-law

AUSTIN — Joe Chagra, who claimed a plea bargain freed him from testifying against relatives, must take the stand in his sister-in-law's retrial on charges of plotting to kill a federal judge, a judge ruled Monday.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions said Chagra must testify when the trial of Elizabeth Chagra begins Tuesday.

Chagra, an El Paso attorney serving 10 years for his part in the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood, claimed an agreement he made with the government in 1982 protected him from testifying against any member of his family.

After an hour-long hearing, Sessions said, "The court feels that despite your strong feeling against appearing against any of your family it is not unreasonable to require you to testify."

Earlier, selection of a jury of seven men and five women was completed for the trial that is expected to last two to four weeks.

Sessions urged the jurors not to look at a television set or glance at a newspaper during the trial.

Mrs. Chagra was convicted in 1982 of conspiracy in the fatal shooting of Wood, who was felled by a rifle shot as he left his San Antonio home.

Wood, who was known as "Maximum John" because of his stern sentences for drug dealers, had been scheduled to preside in the government's drug case against Mrs. Chagra's husband, Jimmy Chagra.

Mrs. Chagra's conspiracy verdict was overturned by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans, which said Sessions gave the jury improper instructions.

At the San Antonio trial, there was testimony that Jimmy Chagra was afraid he would be sentenced to life in prison and that he, with the aid of others, hired Charles Harrelson to kill the judge.

Joe Chagra testified Monday he agreed to testify against Harrelson, provided he did not have to testify against his older brother.

"My main concern was not to testify against any member of my fam-

Senator eligible to run for Mattox's job

HOUSTON — The 1st Court of Civil Appeals on Monday ruled that state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, is eligible to contend for the Texas attorney general's post.

After the three-judge panel ruled he was eligible for the Republican primary in May, Brown said, "I'm excited about the order. I'm glad to have it over with so that we now will get on the ballot and continue our campaign for attorney general."

Brown asked the Texas Supreme Court to order party chairman George Strake to permit the senator on the Republican primary ballot as an attorney general candidate. But the court on Feb. 3 refused to consider Brown's request, so Brown took the case to the Houston appeals court.

The question of Brown's eligibility centered on a provision in the state Constitution saying a legislator is ineligible, during the term for which he was elected, for "any civil office . . . which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which may have been increased, during such term."

In 1985 the Legislature raised the salary of the attorney general from $70,400 to $71,100, an increase of less than 1 percent.

But the Legislature also put a special provision on the bill that said if a lawmaker is elected to another office, such as attorney general, the salary of that office would be rolled back to what it had been before the bill was passed.

Brown argued he should be allowed to seek the attorney's general's post in November because the increase was less than 1 percent and the provision stated he wouldn't get the increase even if he was elected.

Brown, 44, has served in the Texas Senate since 1981.

Three other Republicans are seeking incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox's post — State District Roy Barrera Jr. of San Antonio, applied only to testimony about Jimmy Chagra.

W. Ray Jahn, the lawyer said, expressly rejected his request that he not testify against Elizabeth Chagra. There was no gentlemen's agreement or any other kind of arrangement not to testify against her."

Mattox, the only Democrat on the ballot, said he had not seen the opinion of the appeals court.

However, Mattox said, "As I have said all along, one Republican about the same as another to me."

"If you look at the clear wording of the constitution, any lay person could see his candidacy violates the wording of the constitution, but that's not saying a court could give it some interpretation," Mattox said.
