legally are motorcycles Motorcycle license

Scooters

required of owners

By MIKE SULLIVAN Reporter

Texas A&M students who own scooters often aren't aware that their vehicles are considered to be motor-cycles in the eyes of the law, said Joe Fisher, owner of University Cycles.

Any two-wheeled vehicle powered by an engine larger than 50 cubic centimeters and able to attain speeds greater than 30 mph is considered a motorcycle.

Fisher said students may think their scooters are mopeds, but mopeds differ from scooters in power and appearance.

Mopeds have engines smaller than 50cc's and tend to look like bicycles with motors.

Scooters typically have engines larger than 50cc's, don't look anything like bicycles and require a mo-torcycle license to be legally oper-

"You can't fly airplanes," Fisher said, "and you can't drive motorcycles with a car license."

He said students often think an operator's license and insurance are all they legally need to drive their

Fisher said neither license is diffi-cult to obtain but the penalty for not having one can be a ticket.

Some students don't understand that their car insurance doesn't cover their two-wheeled vehicles,

Liability insurance is the most ba-sic coverage for any type of motor vehicle, and for motorcycles and mopeds it costs about $50 per year. Without liability insurance, a another person could be sued directly by the other party.

Mopeds and motorcycles are becoming more popular each year, Fisher said. University Police Maj. Linda Lively said 1,900 motorcycle parking permits were issued this

With an increase in motorcycles and mopeds comes an increase in the potential for motor vehicle/pedestrian accidents.

At A&M, about one accident involving motorcycles or mopeds oc-curs each week. University Police Chief Elmer Schneider said 17 inju-ries have resulted from accidents this year.

Fortunately, Schneider said, most of the injuries wern't serious because they occurred at low speeds.

Lively said part of the problem is students who illegally ride their mopeds, and occasionally motorcycles, through campus. She said students have been allowed to park their mopeds in bicycle racks on campus, but they are supposed to walk or peddle their mopeds to the racks in the inner campus area.

"We gave them some latitude, but it didn't work," Lively said.

She said the regulation will be changed next year. Then mopeds, like scooters, will be considered motorcycles and won't be allowed to be parked in bike racks but will have to be parked in the areas designated for motorcycles.

Fisher said most motorcycle and moped accidents could be avoided if drivers would learn to drive defensively and be aware of their environ-

"Using the superior brakes and agility (of motorcycles and mopeds) a driver can easily avoid an accident," Fisher said.

He said many drivers listen to a personal stereo headset while they drive, insulating their senses from the environment and making them-selves extremely vulnerable.

Motorcycle and moped drivers must be especially aware of their surroundings because many times automobile drivers don't give them the or scooter is just like riding a bicycle
