Guards report no injuries in Lisbon

Terrorists bomb U.S. embassy

LISBON, Portugal — A bomb placed in the car of a U.S. Embassy employee exploded Tuesday in the embassy compound, sending flames and shattered metal slashing through the air but causing no injuries, guards reported.

State Department officials in Washington said the bomb was discovered during a routine check by a security guard and was located in the trunk of a car of an American or Portuguese employee of the embassy.

The officials said the car was moved to an isolated area in the compound where the bomb went off.

"There was no indication of any material loss except for the car," said one official, who spoke with the condition he not be identified.

He said no one asserted responsibility for the bombing, but embassy officials suspected the Popular Forces of April 25 (FP-25), a left-wing Portuguese group.

A guard working for the Portuguese security firm that checks all vehicles entering the grounds of the complex said after the bomb was discovered all personnel were cleared from the area.

Embassy public affairs officer Steve Chaplin told reporters the car belonged to an embassy employee who had returned to finish up some work after the embassy had closed at the normal hour of 5:30 p.m. The bomb went off shortly before 7 p.m.

A U.S. diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the man whose car was bombed was a friend of his and he was safely away when the device went off.

It was not known if the driver had left the vehicle for the security check, or was warned to get out after the device was found.

The diplomat said the bomb probably had been placed in the car while it was parked somewhere in Lisbon outside the embassy, and was set to explode in the street since the terrorists would not have known the employee planned to return to work.

Monday's bombing was the third attack or attempted attack on the embassy since Oct. 27, 1984.

It was then that police found a home-made mortar launcher with two 60mm shells ready to be fired into the compound.

The device was dismantled and no group claimed responsibility.

Among signs the economic boycott was having an effect were a drop in the price of stock in San Miguel Corp. and reports that several banks had unusual withdrawals. San Miguel stock traded Tuesday at 55 cents a share, down from Friday's 70 cents and the Monday close of 57.5 cents.

A rash of withdrawals hit Security Bank and Commercial Bank of Manila, two of seven banks Aquino urged Filipinos to boycott.

Value of Philippine peso plunges

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine peso took its biggest plunge in 15 years Tuesday, and there were indications an opposition boycott called by Corason Aquino was hitting the nation's already troubled economy.

Some top businessmen quit as advisers to President Ferdinand E. Marcos. The country's biggest manufacturing company experienced falling stock prices after Aquino urged the boycott to protest the declaration of Marcos' controversial Feb. 7 presidential election victory.

The peso's value fell by 10.3 percent Tuesday, from 19.98 to the dollar Monday to 22.04 in trading at the foreign exchange center.

Elsewhere, state prosecutors filed multiple murder charges against Arturo Pacifador, a powerful Marcos ally in the National Assembly, and 5,000 protesters took to the streets to denounce election fraud and what they claim was U.S. support for Marcos.

At a nearby church, Jose Conception, chairman of the National Movement for Free Elections, a citizens vote-monitoring organization known as Namfrel, wept for a volunteer who was shot to death when he tried to stop gunmen from stealing ballot boxes during the election.

TYRE, Lebanon — Israeli troops and armor swarmed over south Lebanon with air and naval support Tuesday searching for two comrades captured by Moslem guerrillas, who threatened to kill one unless Israel withdrew.

A Moslem extremist group said it had killed a Lebanese Jew kidnapped a year ago as revenge for the raid.

Helicopter gunships strafed suspected guerrilla hideouts to support the hundreds of Israeli troops on the ground. Jet fighters crisscrossed the skies, breaking the sound barrier over Beirut, Tyre and Sidon.

Lightly armed guerrillas fought advancing Israelis in the olive groves and tobacco fields. Lebanese radio stations claimed the resistance was stiff, but security forces reported only scattered fighting and said the powerful raiding force overwhelmed pockets of resistance.

The captives were taken Monday in an ambush inside the security zone Israel maintains just north of its border with Lebanon.

Capsule producers say ban won't work

WASHINGTON — There's no point in doing away with medicine capsules in light of a poisoning linked to Tylenol capsules since "a dedicated tamperer" could poison other forms of medicine, too, a spokesman for drug manufacturers said Tuesday.

John T. Walden, senior vice president of the Proprietary Association, which represents non-prescription drug makers, acknowledged that the poisoning death and the discovery of cyanide in another bottle of capsules in the same Bronxville, N.Y., community had caused a "very large" public relations problem for drug companies.

But major technological steps against drug-tampering may not be in sight, despite crash efforts by the companies, Walden told reporters.

However, he also said, "I think the industry is very confident in the systems they now use" to prevent tampering.

He defended the industry's safety record, saying the current uproar is about "two capsules of one version of one company's medication found in one neighborhood of one community."

Billions of pills are still being sold on shelves nationwide, and Walden said they are as safe from tampering as the industry can make them.

Officials of Johnson & Johnson, parent company of McNeil Laboratories, which makes Tylenol, said Monday that production of Tylenol capsules would be stopped.

However, Walden said, "The rest of the industry has no plans at this time to walk away from capsules."

Asked if the technicians were discussing a relatively new system of sealing capsules by sound waves — leaving them in one piece rather than two and thereby perhaps making tampering more noticeable — Walden said that system was being discussed along with many others.
