Aggie women netters find going easy against Lamar

By KEN SURY
Assistant Sports Editor

Despite a swirling cross wind which kept both teams off-balance for much of the afternoon, the Texas A&M women's tennis team eased to an 8-1 victory over Lamar Tuesday.

The Aggies' only loss came in the No. 6 singles match as Lamar's Donna Van Auken defeated Kellie Dorman, 0-6, 7-5, 7-5.

A&M Women's Tennis Coach Bobby Kleinecke said Dorman's match was a tough one for the Aggies to lose because she won the first set easily and was leading the second, 4-1, when Van Auken mounted a comeback.

Kleinecke added that Lamar played all out against A&M because the Cardinals had nothing to lose and everything to gain if they could upset the Aggies.

"It's a lot like we'll probably play against Trinity (No. 3 in the preseason national rankings) this Saturday," Kleinecke said. "We'll just go out there (to San Antonio) and have fun since we're not expected to really win any games against them. And, playing relaxed like that, we'll probably play some pretty close matches."

Kleinecke said the top half of his singles team, Vanne Akagi, Kim Labuschagne and Gave Lynne Gensler have been playing strong, competitive tennis. He especially praised the play of Akagi. "She's getting so much more mentally tough for these matches," he said. "She's not just concentrating on her strokes, but also on outthinking her opponent. I'm really looking for a good year from Vanne."

Kleinecke said the bottom half of the singles looked shaky against Lamar, but added, "If we make the corrections we need to, we'll be in good shape for conference."

The A&M women's next matches are Friday when they and the men host Louisiana Tech at 1:30 p.m. at the Omar Smith Tennis Center.

Evert Lloyd moves into Lipton semis

Associated Press

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd dominated unseeded Terry Phelps 6-2, 6-0 in just 50 minutes Tuesday night in the quarterfinals of the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships.

Earlier Tuesday, Steffi Graf, 16, of West Germany held off a determined rally by Zina Garrison to join Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and Kathy Rinaldi in the semifinals.

The second-seeded Graf, who lost two match points in the 10th game of the second set, eventually wore down sixth-seeded Garrison and won 6-2, 6-7, 6-3. Sukova, the seventh seed, ripped 14th-seeded Barbara Potter 6-1, 6-2. And the ninth-seeded Rinaldi won a battle of 18-year-olds, tripping 12th-seeded Carling Bassett of Canada 7-6, 6-2.

In the Thursday semifinals, Sukova plays Graf and Rinaldi plays Lloyd.

Lloyd said she wanted to win impressively against Phelps because she felt she had played poorly in the first week of this tournament. Though she hasn't lost a set, several of her first eight sets were close. That wasn't the case Tuesday when Phelps lost the final 11 games.

"I just felt a little more pumped up for some reason," Lloyd said. "I moved her all over the court. Her game is to play steady, but I think she felt she had to go for some shots against me she wouldn't have against the other girls."

The day matches, originally scheduled for 11 a.m., finally got started at just after 2 p.m. But after two games, the rain began to fall again and the players were shuttled back to the players' lounge for another 90-minute delay.

When play resumed, Sukova went right to work, finishing off Potter in only 53 minutes on an outside court. The tall Czech hasn't lost a set in the tournament.

Meanwhile, Graf appeared to be on her way to an equally easy quarterfinal victory, romping to a 6-2, 5-3 lead against Garrison. But the spunky Garrison refused to quit.

In the tense 10th game of the second set, Graf had two match points, but lost them both when Garrison got to the net for volleys. Finally, on Garrison's third break point, Graf hit a forehand volley long to tie the game score at 5-5.

Both of them held serve to force a tie-breaker, which Garrison won 7-3 with four of her points coming on volley winners.

But that took a lot out of Garrison, and it showed as she started having serving problems. She double-faulted twice to lose her serve in the sixth game of the final set, and double-faulted on break point in the eighth game to fall behind 5-3.

Finding the turning point of the Rinaldi-Bassett match took no expert. At 6-5 in the first-set tie-breaker, Rinaldi set Bassett up with an easy lob at the net. But the Canadian blew it, hitting the ball long to give Rinaldi the set.

She never got over the disappointment in the second set.

"I got lucky on that point," Rinaldi said. "I don't know if it was from the tension of the match or what. I think the first set was very tight."

"It's just too bad that she missed on set point."

The eight players in Wednesday's men's quarterfinals range from the predictable to the incredible, with a few interesting possibilities in the middle.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, second-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden and third-seeded Jimmy Connors lead the march into Wednesday's men's quarterfinals.

Then, there's Milan Srejber, the towering Czech who burst onto the international tennis two weeks ago with a runner-up performance at the Toronto Indoors, his first Grand Prix event.

There's Guy Forget, suddenly playing up to the level of his promising juniors career, and his more famous French compatriot Yannick Noah.

Finally, there was two more of the seemingly endless parade of talented young Swedes — fifth-seeded Stefan Edberg and 10th-seeded Joakim Nystrom.

Robertson guides Spurs past Suns

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Guard Alvin Robertson registered a quadruple double for only the second time in NBA history, as he led the San Antonio Spurs to a 120-114 win over the Phoenix Suns Tuesday night.

Robertson scored 20 points, dealt out 10 assists, stole the ball 10 times and ripped down 10 rebounds as he hit double figures in four statistical categories.

Nate Thurmond, who had 22 points, 14 rebounds, 13 assists and 12 blocked shots on opening night of the 1974-75 season for the Chicago Bulls, accomplished the only other known "quadruple double" in the NBA.

Spurs' forward Mike Mitchell led all scorers with 27 points, including 13 in the opening period.

But late in the fourth quarter when Phoenix rallied to within one point at 112-111, Mitchell took control and hit a baseline jump shot to give San Antonio some breathing room.

On the Spurs' next possession, Robertson made the biggest steal of
