Violence spreading along West Bank

Associated Press
 TEL AVIV, Israel — Violence spread in the occupied territories Tuesday, two days after an Israeli-appointed mayor was murdered, but Prime Minister Shimon Peres vowed to continue easing control over West Bank cities.

Israeli troops fired on a group of young Palestinians in the market place at Nablus, whose mayor was assassinated Sunday, wounding a 22-year-old in the leg, military sources reported.

They said the Palestinians had refused to stop for questioning and some began throwing stones.

The marketplace is near the spot where Mayor Zafer al-Masri was shot Sunday while walking to the city hall in Nablus, 30 miles north of Jerusalem.

In occupied Gaza, Palestinian youths threw a smoke grenade at an Israeli army jeep patrolling the market of Gaza City, causing no casualties, the military sources said. Soldiers erected roadblocks, the sources said.

Soldiers fired on demonstrators throwing stones Monday at a refugee camp near Nablus, killing a Palestinian man and wounding his son.

At least 50,000 mourners, equip-alent to more than half the city's population, filled the streets during al-Masri's funeral later in the day.

Peres said in a speech to army officers he intended to pursue his policy of looser control over cities in the West Bank of the Jordan River, despite growing domestic criticism.

"We must not despair of our proposal for devolution of authority in Judea and Samaria," he said, using the biblical names for the area Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

"We do not want to run the Arabs' lives," he said. "They are trying to describe us as conquerers. This is not true and we have no interest in being so."

Peres said Israel would "continue an initiative for direct dialogue with Jordanians and Palestinians."

One objective of the new policy is to build a moderate Palestinian leadership in the West Bank that can negotiate peace with Israel in association with Jordan.

Al-Masri's murder, which was taken as a warning against cooperating with Israel, frightened three Palestinian moderates into withdrawing their candidacies for other West Bank mayoral posts.

Official says Palme slain by professional

Associated Press
 STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Police commissioner Hans Holmer said Tuesday he has concluded that the assassin of Prime Minister Olof Palme was a professional hit man. Authorities offered a $70,000 reward for his capture.

Officials said a cab driver saw the gunman, who shot Palme in the back on a well-lighted downtown street, leap into a car and speed away with at least one accomplice seconds before police arrived at the murder scene Friday night.

Holmer told Swedish television his conclusion was based on details of the attack, including the bullets used and the close-range from which the gunman fired at Palme, who was 59.

"I have come to the conclusion that this man is a professional in the underworld," he told an interviewer.

Sune Sandstroem, the Stockholm police chief, said police arrived seconds after the assassin's car raced away on the snow-covered street.

A witness to the shooting said earlier that he chased Palme's killer on foot but lost him.

Commissioner Holmer told reporters about the taxi driver's report at a news conference earlier Tuesday.

He said the cabbie noted only part of the license number, and police would not describe the vehicle.

In announcing the reward, he said, "I hope there are people sheltering or who have sheltered this man who are willing to turn him in."

Holmer said investigators had received 4,000 tips about the case.

CIA's deputy director resigns

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Tuesday accepted the resignation of Deputy CIA Director John N. McMahon and quickly named another career intelligence officer to the government's No. 2 spot under top spy William Casey.

A surprise announcement by the White House Tuesday evening said Reagan would nominate Robert M. Gates, the agency's deputy director for intelligence, to replace McMahon.

McMahon, 56, a 34-year veteran of intelligence work, gave no explanation for his resignation other than to say in a letter to Reagan he had "reached a stage where I should move on."

Gates, 42, is a specialist in Soviet and Eastern European affairs who has served two tours on the National Security Council staff at the White House.

The White House statement said the president had accepted McMahon's resignation cited "personal reasons" for the deputy's departure.

GM to import inexpensive Korean cars in '87

Associated Press
 DETROIT — Auto executive L. Michael Losh sensed something strange when he first set foot in a South Korean car plant, and then he spotted it.

Accustomed to American workers in jeans and T-shirts, he watched Koreans toil on the assembly line while bundled to the neck in heavy winter coats.

"They don't heat the plants," he said. "It makes for a brisk work environment."

Losh tells the story with a smile, but not a laugh. No one in Detroit is laughing at the quickly rising Korean car industry these days, least of all Losh.

As head of General Motors Corp.'s Pontiac division, he is coordinating the importation early next year of a subcompact South Korean car that GM will call the Pontiac Lemans.

GM will import the cars from Daewoo, one of three industrial conglomerates that now manufactures cars. Daewoo and the other two companies, Hyundai and Kia, have a common goal — the lucrative U.S. auto market.

South Korea's competitiveness derives from its labor costs. Its autoworkers are paid about $2 an hour including benefits, according to a University of Michigan estimate, and they commonly work 60-hour weeks.

The United Auto Workers union claims some Korean autoworkers are paid wages as low as 64 cents an hour.

The first U.S. sales of South Korean cars were registered officially Tuesday by Hyundai Motor Co. Ltd., which this month introduced a front-wheel drive subcompact.

Hyundai (pronounced Hunday) plans to sell 100,000 cars in the United States this year from its plant in Ulsan, South Korea.

Lay it on the line.

Ask any Navy pilot. It doesn't come any more thrilling than this. Landing an F-14 on the rolling deck of a carrier at sea is a challenge that tests the skills of the best.

Navy flight training. Navigation. Aerodynamics. It's the best you can get. But along with the airborne thrills, Navy pilots and flight officers get down-to-earth skills.

There is no boot camp. College graduates get leadership and management training at Aviation Officer Candidate School. It's challenge and responsibility. The satisfaction of knowing you're with a topflight team.

You can't beat the rewards either. An excellent starting salary. Unexcelled benefits. And opportunities to move up fast.

Lead the Adventure as a Navy pilot or flight officer. And let your pride fly high. Contact your Navy Officer Recruiter or call 1-800-327-NAVY.
