Center extends tips to students looking for jobs

By HOMER JACOBS
Reporter

For most Texas A&M students, searching for a job probably has as much appeal as paying parking tickets or waiting in drop-add lines. But Judy Vulliet, assistant director of the center, says the job search can be a successful and even pleasant experience with the help of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

The placement center has four counselors who are available by appointment to provide advice, job searches and the center's resources. It serves all majors although interviews aren't available for every profession. "The vast majority of employers don't recruit on college campuses," Vulliet says. She says the placement center conducts more than 30,000 interviews a year for the 5,000 students registered at the center.

She also says freshmen and sophomores should begin thinking about their careers as soon as they arrive on campus.

Although underclassmen may not be actively seeking job interviews with prospective employers, students can help their futures by participating in cooperative education and maintaining good grades, Vulliet says.

"Most major employers look at good grades," she says. "If you have a 2.2 grade-point ratio, a company like IBM is not going to hire you." Vulliet says cooperative education is the best work experience available because the student is able to work for two semesters.

If a student doesn't want to go the co-op route, he at least should be seeking summer employment that is professionally relevant, Vulliet says.

She also says a solid list of activities involving leadership positions impresses employers. "The employers are looking for the people that get the job done," Vulliet says.

She says belonging to a certain club is not always enough.

"If you belong to an organization, be active in it," Vulliet says. Upperclassmen should have well-prepared resumes and polished interview techniques if they are to succeed in their job search, she says.

Vulliet says the most frequent mistakes on resumes involve GPRs and descriptions of jobs the students have had. "They shortchange themselves," she says.

Vulliet says she tells a student to list the GPR from his last 60 hours if the student had a slow academic start in his first two years of college. In such a case she says a student also could choose to list his GPR strictly for courses pertaining to his major. She says that even though a person may be a student worker, the job should be described as a normal form of employment.

But the single most important aspect of the job search is the interview, Vulliet says.

"Studies have shown that over 90 percent of the time, the decision of for or against hiring is made in the first five minutes of the interview," Vulliet says.

A student approaching an interview should dress appropriately, look friendly, be prompt and know the name and title of the interviewer, she says.

Vulliet says proper telephone manners and letter-writing skills improve communication with the employer.

"If you're a good candidate, your degree will not stop you from getting a job," she says.

Vulliet says the best time for a student to begin looking for interviews is during the fall semester of his last year in school.

She says the main recruiting season for employers begins the third week of the semester and continues for another 12 weeks.

Fire ants bugging Lubbock; 'swat team' to start today

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Agriculture plans to begin chemical warfare today against "gypsy" fire ants that survived what scientists said the ants could not endure — winter in Lubbock.

"This colony has significantly changed our thinking on how far north the ants can naturally progress," said Dr. A. Ann Sorensen, an agriculture department pest specialist. "This is definitely not good news."

The gypsy ants arrived in Lubbock on a shipment of oak trees from East Texas, a heavily infested region.

Research has ended and the battle will begin. Armed with maps showing 207 mounds, TDA's new "swat team" will drench the colonies with dursban. The area will be treated later with Amdro as a back-up to the initial treatment.

The ants also will be attacked by the agriculture agency, which recently set up a 17-member swat team to battle fire ants.

The agency estimates the Texas fire ant population at 160 trillion.
