They were unanimous on drinking beer at Dudley's and ordering delivery from Pizza Hut. Pizza must be harder to dribble on your projects.

Final score: Bill—2, Mike—1, Wes—1. Total score for Zachry: 4

At the Academic Building I questioned three liberal arts majors. Wendy Motooka and Eddie Martinez, both senior economics majors, and Kristin Serstab, a senior modern languages major.

Wendy and Eddie had no opinion about the most romantic restaurant in town but Kristin answered correctly.

"Steak and Ale because it's dark," she said (blushing as soon as she realized she'd just said that in front of Eddie).

Fajita Ritas was unanimous for all three but Eddie supported his answer with an argument and went into an explanation of why fajitas were so good at Fajita Ritas.

"They're not fajitas in the first place," he said. "They're sirloin strips which is why it tastes so good. And it's prettier than the fajitas you get at Deluxe Burger Bar."

Even when it comes to taste, count on Liberal Arts majors to retain their sense of aesthetics.

Score: Kristin: 2, Wendy: 1, Eddie: 0. Eddie lost his point for talking bad about Deluxe Burger Bar.

The best place to drink beer was unanimous again, with Deluxe Burger Bar. Eddie got his lost point back by complimenting the atmosphere.

"I like the atmosphere," he said, "and I've been going there for years and years so I feel really comfortable. You can stay and talk as long as you like. It's a cool place to hang around."

For ice cream, Wendy and Eddie bombed with the has-been Charlie's, but Kristin answered right. All three missed the delivery question with answers of Deb's Deli and Pizza Hut, but the liberal arts majors at the Academic Building still won the Best of College Station Contest.

Final score: Kristin—4, Wendy—2, Eddie—2. Total for the Academic Building: 7.

Editors' Note: Although we trust Molly's taste in most things, we think her sense of smell must be off. In the fajita category, La Taqueria and Tortilla Factory gets kudos for authenticity and flavor but loses points because their chips aren't free. Ken Martins' new Fajita Grill is the other front-runner, disqualified because they don't serve beer.
