—Restaurant Report—

By BRIAN PEARSON
Senior Staff Writer

The restaurants listed below were inspected by the Brazos County Health Department between March 31 and April 4. The information is based on food service establishment inspection reports.

David Jefferson, a registered sanitarian at the department, says restaurants with scores of 95 or above generally have excellent operations and facilities. Jefferson says restaurants with scores in the 70s or low 80s usually have serious health report violations.

Scores can be misleading, Jefferson says, because restaurants can achieve the same score by having several major violations or an abundance of minor violations. He says the major violations might close an establishment down while some minor violations can be corrected while the health inspector is still in the building during the inspection.

Jefferson says the department might close a restaurant if the score is below 60, the personnel has infectious diseases, the restaurant lacks adequate refrigeration, a sewage backup exists in the building, or the restaurant has a complete lack of sanitization for the food equipment.

Point deductions, or violations, on the report form range from a one point (minor violation) to five points (major violation). The department inspects each restaurant about every six months.

Sometimes a follow-up inspection must be made, usually within 10 days. Jefferson says a restaurant might require a follow-up inspection if it has a four- or five-point violation that cannot be corrected while the inspector is still there or if there are numerous small violations.

Inspectors are registered sanitarians at the department.

SCORED 95 OR ABOVE:
• Igloo's at 817 University Drive in College Station was inspected by David Pickens. Score — 99. One point was subtracted in the report because an employee was not wearing a hair restraint.

• Deb's Deli at 404 University Drive E. in College Station was inspected by Mike Lester. Score — 97. The report showed a one-point violation for some dirty shelves. Another point in the report was subtracted because a dumpster area needed cleaning. A third point in the report was subtracted because of a dirty floor in a cooler.

• Egg Roll House at 200 University Drive E. was inspected by Mike Lester. Score — 97. The report showed a two-point violation for trash that wasn't in plastic bags. One point in the report was subtracted for dirty vent filters and cooler shelves which were too low to the floor.

SCORED BETWEEN 90 AND 94:

• Chicken Oil Company at 3600 S. College Ave. in Bryan was inspected by David Platt. Score — 93. A four-point violation in the report was given because some gaps leading to the outside of the building needed to be sealed. Two points in the report were subtracted for an ice bin that needed to be drained. The report showed a one-point violation for a "filthy" floor in a cooler.

SCORED BETWEEN 85 AND 89:

• Laredo Bar at 313 S. College Ave. in College Station was inspected by David Pickens. Score — 88. Four points in the report were subtracted because of an abundance of cockroaches. The report showed a two-point violation for dirt and fungus in an ice machine. Another two points in the report were subtracted because some juice and syrup bottles had no caps on them. Four one-point violations were given for a backed up drain and leaks in some plumbing, a hole in a ceiling, an old hot water heater that needed to be removed and a dirty ice machine and bar area. The report said a follow-up inspection will be made in 14 days.

Goals for library not being met

By Mary Ann Harvey
Staff Writer

The Sterling C. Evans Library has never met goals set for Texas A&M by the Board of Regents, Regent William A. McKenzie said Friday at a meeting of the Friends of the Sterling C. Evans Library.

"I could stand here today and tell you what a great library we have, but it would not be true," McKenzie told about 70 group members. "You know it, I know it and Sterling C. Evans certainly knows it. This library has never matched the goals that we set for Texas A&M University."

McKenzie said the library lacks support.

"I'm told that recently a nationally-known librarian wrote that 'Texas A&M did not deserve the library that it has,'" he said, "the point being that the University never supported the library as it should have."

McKenzie told supporters that the University has a good start on improvements because of its excellent library staff.

"During the past few years they have used the limited resources at their disposal to greatly enlarge the access students and other scholars have to books," he said.

McKenzie said something else is needed besides a dedicated staff — money.

"By analogy, I used to say the five ingredients to a sound political campaign were, first, a good candidate, in other words, the Sterling C. Evans Library," McKenzie said. "Secondly, volunteers such as staff and good friends. Thirdly, money. Fourthly, money. And, fifthly, money."

He said the library's budget for next year is about $6.6 million.

"It's just enough to maintain the status quo," he said. "However, the status quo is just not enough. We need to do better."

McKenzie said he recognizes that progress is being made but said more is needed. He said the Board of Regents recently approved using $1 million from the Available University Fund to improve the library's holdings.

"More is needed, however," McKenzie said. "We cannot have a great research university until we have a great research library."

McKenzie asked supporters to re-dedicate themselves to working for the library and to give what money they could.

"In doing so, you will help in your own way to make this University great," he said. "We've got a long road to go."

Students named 'outstanding juniors'

By Karen Boehnke

Excellence in studies and extracurricular activities has earned two Texas A&M students the honor of being selected by Time magazine as two of the 100 most outstanding college juniors in the nation.

John Humphries, a civil engineering major, and James Cleary, a history major, received their awards March 31 at a presentation dinner in New York City.

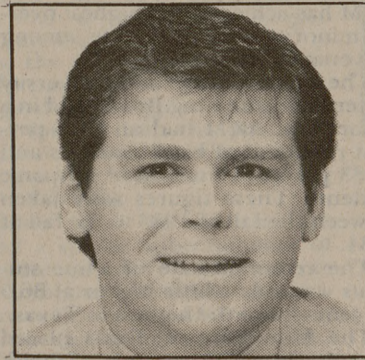

Part of the application process was demonstrating evidence of excellence in a specific area of extracurricular involvement.

Cleary's main area of involvement is Student Government. He is currently the vice president of academic affairs and was a candidate for student body president. His grade-point ratio is 3.7.

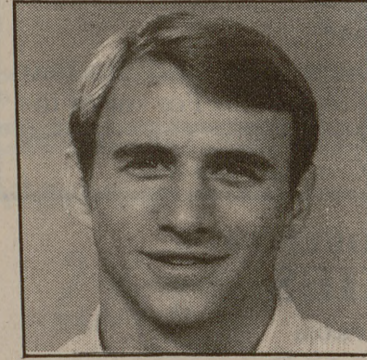

Humphries is involved in international student groups and programs to promote international understanding. Humphries' GPR is 3.9.

Cleary said he was pleased when he learned of being chosen as a finalist, but he didn't think he'd get that far.

"If someone were to have told me when I was a freshman that I'd get search aide for a graduate student from Sri Lanka. Next fall, Humphries said, he will study in Sri Lanka and work on rural development projects.

While Humphries is in Asia, Cleary plans to keep busy closer to home.

He said he wants to continue participating in Student Government while pursuing his education. He also plans to work on an Undergraduate Fellows project and find a way to finance his post-graduate education.

Both Cleary and Humphries attribute their achievements to hard work and enjoying what they do.

But hard work is only part of it, Humphries said.

"It's partly being in the right place at the right time and taking advantage of opportunities that have been open for me," Humphries said.

Cleary said he thinks he works at things a little bit harder than other people.

"I enjoy school, and I like learning new things," he said.

this far, being vice president of academic affairs, selected as one of the top 100 juniors in the country and running for student body president, I would probably have laughed and thought it was pretty funny," he said.

Humphries also said he was pleased and said he wants to use the publicity from the award to call attention to the programs he is working on.

"I thought the most exciting thing for me was the opportunity to give some publicity to the international programs I am involved with," Humphries said.

Humphries said he became involved with international programs when he was chosen as one of the top 100 high school juniors in the nation and was awarded a special Japan/U.S. Senate Scholarship. As part of that program, Humphries visited Japan as an exchange student.
