Winging to Austin via Royale Airline available for $29

By Loyd Brumfield
Reporter

If you want to get to Austin fast, but don't want to drive for two hours, Royale Airlines may have a deal for you.

Beginning Monday, Royale Airlines will initiate flight service from Easterwood Airport to Austin for $29.

One flight will depart at 8:35 a.m. and arrive at Robert Mueller Municipal Airport in Austin at 9:10 a.m. and another will depart at 4:50 p.m. and arrive at 5:25 p.m.

Michael Lato, local manager for Royale Airlines, says the new service was initiated because of public demand.

"People around here have been asking for this service for years now," Lato said. "They've wanted a quick, easy way to get to Austin and now we're providing it for them."

Community businesses have been especially vocal in wanting flights to Austin, Lato said.

"Businesses want the service to improve transportation to Austin and make it quicker," he said.

"A community like this — a community of 100,000 — really needs this service. We hope this will make the area more attractive to businesses and conventions and things that normally wouldn't be drawn to the two cities."

Lato said the service will be used primarily for Texas A&M but it will also be available to the public.

"Texas A&M conducts a lot of business with the University of Texas," Lato said. "Our flights to Austin should make business between the schools easier to organize."

Lato says he thinks people will actually fly to Austin instead of driving.

"Especially if they are going to Austin for one day to conduct business," he said. "We make it very quick and convenient to grab a flight instead of driving for two hours."

Lato said the service to Austin will allow customers to get connecting flights to Western cities more easily. Jet America, Continental Airlines, Delta Airlines and TWA Airlines offer connecting service from Austin.

Lato says Royale hopes to make the service to Austin a permanent feature.

"We hope to get a lot of community support on this," he said. "We need support so we can make this a permanent deal."

Report says import tax can alleviate oil woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional supporters of imposing a fee on imported oil got new ammunition Thursday from a report saying such a levy would be the best way to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and raise money to help trim budget deficits.

"We cannot overlook the opportunity offered by the rapidly falling oil prices," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "This may be a once-in-a-century chance to simultaneously improve our fiscal condition, put part of the burden of the tax on foreigners and alleviate positively our energy predicament and our dependence."

The report from the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office said that of various oil tax options, the import fee would be the best means of reducing U.S. demand for imports and encouraging domestic exploration and production.

"By raising the price of oil imports, an oil import tariff would encourage all activities that could substitute for oil imports: domestic oil production, production of substitutes for oil, conservation of oil and substitution of other fuels for oil," the report said. "It would therefore lead to the greatest possible reduction in oil imports . . . and provide the most assistance to domestic producers."

The import fee has failed to generate much support. For example, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, has said within the past month that there are no more than five votes on the 20-member panel in favor of the fee.

Earlier this year, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said President Reagan was keeping the door open on consideration of an oil import fee as a way to reduce budget deficits. However, Reagan later slammed the door, saying he would not accept such a levy, or any other general tax increase.

Nonetheless, Domenici and others in Congress continue to push the idea as a way to shrink government red ink.
