Ag swimmer to try out for World Games

By Ken Sury
Sports Editor

Swimmer Chris O'Neil, who completed his career at Texas A&M this spring, heads to Orlando, Fla., Saturday for next week's World Games Trials in the hopes of securing a spot on one of two national teams.

O'Neil, an All-America each of his four years at A&M, finished second in the 100-meter butterfly the last two years at the NCAA Championships to Stanford's Pablo Morales.

Many of the nation's top swimmers will be at the meet, including Morales and Matt Biondi, who also will compete in the 100-meter butterfly against O'Neil.

The top two finishers at the Trials in each event will earn a position on the World Games team which will compete in Madrid, Spain Aug. 16-21. The No. 3 and 4 finishers will make the Goodwill Games in Moscow this July.

"It's probably gonna come down to a three-man race," O'Neil said of the 100 butterfly event, which will be swum Monday. "I've been feeling pretty strong, swimming well and starting to feel confident."

"I'm looking for a good race. I just hope it all goes well."

O'Neil will do all his training here at A&M with his sights set on the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, Korea.

He and teammate Jeff Marx, who also finished his career at A&M this year, will be student assistant coaches to the Aggie swim team this fall.

O'Neil, who also will compete in the '87 Pan American games, has about a year left to finish his construction science degree and hopes to work on his freestyle and medley swimming to complement his butterfly talents.

"A lot of people know Chris O'Neil as a (butter) flyer," he said. "Hopefully I can get them to notice me for other events. It'll also keep me from getting bored with the 100 Fly."

Crenshaw back on 'course'

AUSTIN (AP) — As he made the turn during the final round of the U.S. Open, Austin's Ben Crenshaw saw what had become an unfamiliar sight in recent months — his name on the leader board.

Not for 1½ years had the former Masters champion been in contention in the final round of a tournament. But there he was, briefly sharing the lead.

And although Raymond Floyd eventually won, Crenshaw is pleased that his game finally seems to have returned.

"I'm really very proud of the way I played. It was like I remembered how to do it," said Crenshaw, who returned home Tuesday after finishing in a tie for third at Shinnecock Hills.

"Sure, I was disappointed not to win when I had the chance. But I made a bunch of little mistakes and you just can't do that," Crenshaw said.

Still, Crenshaw played well. But why? He had won less than $40,000 coming into the tournament and hadn't been a factor this year.

Apparently, the effects of a thyroid problem — which caused him to lose weight and energy — continued to hamper him earlier, despite his taking medication since January. And his confidence is one of his favorite courses.

The Crenshaw comeback may have weeks ago, when he quit taking medication for the thyroid problem.

Since January, Crenshaw had taken of Inderal a day, supplementing that with months with Propylthiouracil. The Crenshaw went to St. David's Gamma Austin and took radioactive iodine. He Propylthiouracil then, and with his throwing he quit taking Inderal two weeks ago.

Crenshaw isn't sure whether the final round, but after chipping two shots in the final round, he's got more confidence in his game.

"It seems like a lot of things are falling me right now. And I'm really feeling him from the host's perspective. I'm just looking forward well, being competitive. Hopefully, all are behind me."

SWC, NCAA to turn over records

From staff and wire reports

The Southwest Conference and NCAA are to turn over records to day concerning their investigations into alleged football recruiting violations according to a suit filed by members of the Dallas news media.

The Dallas Morning News and The Dallas Times Herald, along with Dallas station WFAA-TV, filed a suit earlier this year asking for the records pertaining to the investigations.

On June 6 U.S. District Judge James Nowlin gave the NCAA and SWC until today to turn over the records so that the information may be reviewed by a judge who will determine which portions of the records can be made available to the public.

Nowlin ruled on May 15 that the athletic organizations are subject to the Texas Open Records Act. A federal judge turned down an appeal Wednesday by the NCAA and SWC to grant an extension of the records.

Mark McDonald, sports editor at The Dallas News, told The Dallas Morning News that one of their lawyers with the judge today to turn over the records. The judge said the information available, or he may wait until a later date.

Bias

ton Celtics were outspoken in their praise of Bias.

"We'll always consider him a member of the Celtics' family," said Celtics' President Red Auerbach, who called Bias the best athlete in the recent draft. "He had the tools and the attitude to be a great player."

Coach K.C. Jones of the Celtics said Bias had undergone a team physical, "and he came out perfect."

At the draft in New York Tuesday, Bias said he couldn't wait to get started on his career.

"I'm happy... related... I can't wait," he said. "What else can I say? I'm in the NBA. I dreamed I'd get drafted. To be able to play for Boston... that was a dream within a dream."

Bias' father, James, attended the draft and then accompanied his son on a trip to Boston. They left Boston on a return flight Wednesday night.

Keeta Covington, a Maryland football player, said he and several others greeted Bias upon his return and talked with him about his new career.

"At about 2 o'clock," Covington said, "he (Bias) said he was tired of all the questions and just wanted to be alone."

The death was the third involving a Maryland basketball player in the past 10 years.

Owen Brown, a Maryland basketball player, died Feb. 4, 1976, at the age of 21, died on the same year, during his year.

Both were struck during pickup basketball games. Medical authorities showed both had different types of facts.
