Anti-apartheid activist's bans lifted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said Monday it lifted all restrictions against anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela, but the press was warned to be careful about quoting her under national emergency regulations. The restrictions on Mandela for the past 20 years governed where she could live and visit and to whom she could speak. Her husband Nelson, an African National Congress leader, has been in jail since 1964 serving a life term for plotting sabotage. Mandela had openly defied many of the restraints. She has had a series of scuffles with security police since January after she ignored her banishment to the rural town of Brandfort and moved to Soweto, Johannesburg's black township. Mandela's name was missing Friday from a Government Gazette listing of banned people, who may not be quoted by the news media or meet with more than two people at a time. Police Capt. Henry Beck, a spokesman for the Minister of Law and Order, confirmed that the restrictions had been lifted, but added that he "would suggest legal advice be obtained before doing so (quoting her) as this is a complicated matter." Under the emergency regulations, no one may be quoted saying anything considered subversive or furthering the aims of the African National Congress, the main black guerrilla organization fighting to overthrow the government and end apartheid. Ninety-seven people remain on the list of banned people. The Bureau of Information said in its daily briefing in Pretoria that police found the bodies of five black people in a partly-burned house in Kwazakele, a black Port Elizabeth township. Police reported that a 58-year-old white man was shot to death in the Port Elizabeth black township of Zwide after dropping off black workers, the 141st person reported killed in political violence since the emergency was declared June 12. Also Monday, about 10,000 black strike and diamond miners were on gold and diamond mines were on strike or staging slowdowns to protest the detention of union leaders under the emergency declaration.

National Action Party claims election fraud in Chihuahua voting

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party claimed Monday that massive fraud took place in the Chihuahua gubernatorial elections and said it would demand the vote be nullified. The governing Institutional Revolutionary Party claimed sweeping victories in the elections Sunday here and in three other of Mexico's 31 states, despite a lack of official results. Official results in Mexico usually are not available until a week after the vote, when state electoral commissions certify them. Citizens voted for mayors of all 67 municipalities in Chihuahua state and for 14 legislators. Francisco Barrio, gubernatorial candidate for National Action, known by its Spanish initials as PAN, said, "We received low blows in the first round. We'll fight with different weapons in the second round." Barrio, the 35-year-old former mayor of Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, said opposition leaders would meet Tuesday to determine what actions will be taken to protest voting irregularities. The elections, he charged at a news conference, "were an insult to the people of Chihuahua." An umbrella organization known as the Democratic Electoral Movement called a public rally for today in Chihuahua to decide if it will take action against the alleged vote fraud. The movement had pledged to "paralyze the state" if vote-rigging occurred. But Fernando Baeza, candidate of the dominant party, known in Spanish as PRI, told supporters at party headquarters Monday, "We're at the entrance of a new phase in the history of Chihuahua. We're in the presence of a PRI that is fortified in action and essence that believes in itself. Barrio and other PAN officials claimed that among the violations found were dozens of ballot boxes already full, the expulsion of PAN representatives as poll watchers, names of PAN supporters not appearing on the voting lists, voting slowdowns in PAN strongholds and a false circular put out early Sunday carrying the PAN logo and urging people not to vote. "We have to contest the elections," Barrio said. We're interested in the way the elections were carried out."

Officials search Kraft plant for bacteria

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Officials searching for the source of bacteria found in ice cream bars that may have sickened more than 170 people in seven states began dismantling a Kraft Inc. plant in Virginia on Monday. "We're going to keep at it until we find the source," said Kraft spokesman Paul Johnson from Glenview company headquarters. Although people in seven states reported flu-like symptoms after eating Polar B'ar ice cream bars, none of them have tested positively for listeriosis, a serious disease caused by the bacteria found in bars at the plant.

Action refused on 'dangerous' drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Health and Human Services Department refused Monday to take emergency action against a widely prescribed arthritis drug suspected of causing deaths among the elderly, saying studies did not support allegations of unreasonable risk. HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen denied a petition that asked him to declare the arthritis drug Feldene an "imminent hazard" to health in people aged 60 and over. The Public Citizen Health Research Group asked Bowen and the FDA to ban the use of Feldene by people over age 59, contending the drug posed dangers among the elderly. The organization's contentions were disputed by Pfizer Inc., manufacturer of the drug, which said Feldene has been reviewed and approved by 106 countries.

Dow Jones average suffers record loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a steep drop Monday, sending the Dow Jones average to a record point loss in selling touched off by economic worries. The Dow Jones average fell 61.87 to 1,839.00, exceeding its previous record point loss of 45.75 points on June 9 of this year. Monday's drop of 3.25 percent was barely one-fourth the size of the 12.9 percent loss the average suffered on Oct. 28, 1929.
