Man gets 20 years in rape case

DALLAS (AP) — A man convicted of kidnapping and raping his ex-girlfriend was sentenced Thursday to two 10-year prison sentences, while four co-defendants received probation sentences.

David Lloyd Cupples, 31, was ordered to prison for his convictions on charges of aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault. Duncanville police arrested six men on Feb. 16 after receiving a phone call from a 20-year-old man who said he and his girlfriend had been abducted at knife-point.

Investigators said the woman, who was bound to a wooden chopping table with a coat hanger during her ordeal, freed herself moments before police arrived at the home in the suburb south of Dallas.

During two days of testimony, the woman testified the attack took place after she went to the home of Cupples, her former boyfriend, to pick up her clothing.

The woman said her current boyfriend, to whom she is now married, was tied up and forced to watch the attack.

Johnny Ray Austin Jr., Joel A. Cruz and James Allen Schultz, all 19, each received 10-year probation sentences for their second-degree sexual assault and third-degree kidnapping convictions.

Richard Edwin DeLoach, 18, was sentenced to a six-year probation term. He was acquitted of a kidnapping charge but was convicted of second-degree sexual assault.

Nelson W. Lancione, 18, who testified he was at the house less than an hour and did not participate in the assault, was acquitted of a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

Cupples was allowed to address the jury during closing arguments in the punishment phase of the trial and apologized to the panel and the other defendants for his "lack of good judgment."

"I am not a successful person," Cupples told the jury. "I'm no pillar of the community. But ladies and gentlemen, I'm not a monster."

ering eliminating tax-exempt bonds — A&M issued a $50 million variable rate note against the Available University Fund, to take advantage of the issue's tax exempt status, Vilagura says.

The government has not since done away with tax-exempt bonds, however.

Vilagura believes that A&M's new construction funding is secure through at least the next three to five years.

But, he estimates, the school eventually will have to reduce its bond issues to $10 million to $15 million a year and find alternative funding sources.

University officials are aware they can't continue to issue bonds faster than the PUF's growth rate, Vilagura says.

What is the PUF/AUF?

By Olivier Uyttebrouck
Staff Writer

The Permanent University Fund
The Permanent University Fund consists of 2 million acres of land in west Texas together with a portfolio of investments purchased by revenues from those lands.

The present value of the PUF stands at slightly more than $2.5 billion and has grown by more than $1 billion since 1980.

The PUF was established by the Texas Constitution in 1876. One million acres of what was thought to be nearly worthless land was set aside, the revenues from which were to be used to construct buildings at the fledgling University of Texas. Seven years later the legislature added another 1 million acres to the PUF.

The legislature awarded Texas A&M a one-third share of the PUF in 1931.

Because of recent declining oil and gas prices, PUF growth has slowed dramatically since its peak growth figures of the PUF since that year:

- 1981 — $260 million (peak growth year)
- 1983 — $179 million
- 1986 — $110 million (estimate)
- 1987 — $85 million to $90 million (estimate)

The Available University Fund
The Texas constitution prohibits UT and A&M from drawing money directly from the PUF. Instead, revenues generated by PUF investments create what is called the Available University Fund.

UT and Texas A&M may issue tax-exempt bonds, backed by the AUF, to fund construction projects, major renovation of buildings and the purchase of capital equipment such as computers, laboratory equipment and library materials.

Below are a few of A&M's annual bond issues since 1976. Before then, A&M issued $5 million in bonds a year, its bonding capacity at that time.

- 1976 — $6 million
- 1979 — $10 million
- 1981 — $20 million
- 1983 — $44 million
- 1985 — $35 million
