Kelly's big-pay contract paying off at box office

FREDONIA, N.Y. (AP) — He was expecting people to ask him for loans, but what surprised quarterback Jim Kelly Tuesday in his first practice as a Buffalo Bill was who was doing the asking.

"Goach (Hank) Bullough came up to me and was asking me to loan him some money," joked Kelly, who became pro football's richest player Monday when he signed a five-year contract worth a reported $8 million.

Asked about it, Bullough said Kelly's version wasn't quite right.

"I asked him for an advancement," Bullough said. "You don't have to pay back an advancement."

Kelly, the most valuable player in the United States Football League in 1984, already is paying back the Bills, who have won only four games in their last two seasons.

At the team's box office at Rich Stadium, hundreds of people gathered for the second day in a row.

The crowd was so large that the team served coffee to those waiting in line, according to assistant general manager Bill Munson, who added that "We had 15 (ticket) sellers today which is about triple what we usually have (and) tomorrow we're bringing in five more sellers."

Denny Lynch, the Bills director of public and community relations, said the team sold 8,000 tickets Tuesday for the Sept. 7 season opener against the New York Jets, boosting sales for that game to about 45,000.

Another 800 season tickets were sold Tuesday, bringing the total since word of Kelly's signing to 1,600, Lynch said. "One guy bought 60 season tickets and another bought 83 season tickets," he added.

Another 400 people — easily the largest crowd of training camp — lined the field at Fredonia State College to watch Kelly's first practice.

The crowd cheered and clapped as Kelly, who missed the morning practice session, threw several long passes during scrimmages.

The former University of Miami quarterback, who spurned the Bills for an offer from the USFL after Buffalo drafted him in 1983, shared playing duties with present starter Bruce Mathison during a simulated scrimmage.

Bob Leahy, the team's quarterback coach, said he spent about an hour during the lunch break briefing Kelly on the team's offense.

Promoter says Hagler to get $10 million for Leonard fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler has been guaranteed $10 million to defend his middleweight title against Sugar Ray Leonard, promoter Bob Arum said Tues-

And Leonard, the former welterweight champ who has not fought since May 11, 1984, will have to take "considerably less than that," according to Arum, who reached agreement for the fight with Hagler in New Hampshire Monday. "After all, Marvin is the champ."

Less money, however, may not be exactly what Leonard and his attorney, Mike Trainer, have in mind. In fact, they may not even have Arum in mind.

Leonard said he had instructed Trainer to begin discussions with Hagler's co-manager, Pat Petronelli, over details of the bout and "the people who will be involved in bringing the fight to the public."

Trainer said he had to sit down with Petronelli to negotiate a number of matters, including the promoter.

"Contrary to earlier reports, no date, site or promotional group has been been decided upon," Leonard said. "Those details will be discussed and mutually agreed upon when Trainer and Petronelli meet. I have high hopes that all the details will be resolved and that a speedy agreement will take place. The sooner the better for all of us."

After meeting with Hagler Monday. Arum said the fight would be the richest in boxing history, topping the best previous paydays for both boxers. Leonard reportedly made $13 million against Thomas Hearns and $10 million for his first meeting with Roberto Duran. Hagler earned about $10 million against Hearns.

When Hagler decided to go ahead with the fight, Leonard was enthusiastic. "I'm very excited that Marvin has decided to meet me in the ring," he said. "He is a great champion and I'm looking forward to fighting him."

Pokes' Walls wants to renegotiate pact

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)

— Dallas Cowboys cornerback Everson Walls says he's earned the right to have his contract renegotiated and may hold out if a new pact isn't signed by the start of the regular sea-

Walls has two years left on a fiveyear contract. However, the Cowboys devised an agreement in 1983 that gave Walls points for earning Pro Bowl, All-Pro and All-Conference recognition.

If Walls accumulated 200 points in the first three years of his contract, the Cowboys said they would renegotiate. Walls' trip to the Pro Bowl last season — his fourth in five years — gave him 200 points.

Joe Bailey, the Cowboys vice president of administration, said Monday he hopes to have Walls signed before Dallas opens against the New York Giants on Sept. 8.

Bailey said he has received no indication from Walls or his attorney, Steve Weinberg, that the cornerback would leave the team if he has not been signed.

Walls told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that contract talks are "not going well at all. It's really been moving slow. ... It took about 22 hours to do Herschel (Walker). It's taken them about six months and 22 days to do mine." Walls added, "When they take this walls added, "When they take this long for a guy who's contributed to the team such as I have, and other guys in the same position, it has to make you wonder what your importance is to the team."

Walls said he would not settle for "any more excuses."

"I know what I want and I will stand my ground. I'm still trying to negotiate. I'm not playing hardball. I just want to try to get as much as I can."
