football teams the past few years. They have nine offensive linemen coming back and that's a plus for them. We'd have the plus in the skill positions. It's easier to line up and play at skills (for the season's first game).

But the experience at the Tiger skill positions is another question.

LSU Coach Bill Arnsparger, in a telephone hookup Tuesday, said freshman redshirt Tom Hodson will start at quarterback, with sophomore Victor Jones at running back and junior Sammy Martin at tailback.

When asked how he expects Hodson to perform, Arnsparger replied, "I'm waiting to see that myself. But he's made good decisions in the workouts and he executes the option well."

Arnsparger said Harvey Williams, the top running back in Texas last year who opted to go to LSU instead of A&M, will probably get to play sometime during the contest, but it will depend on the situation.

The A&M offense impressed Arnsparger. "It's one of the better offenses in college football," he said. "It's something to just sit there and watch. They're outstanding in every respect."

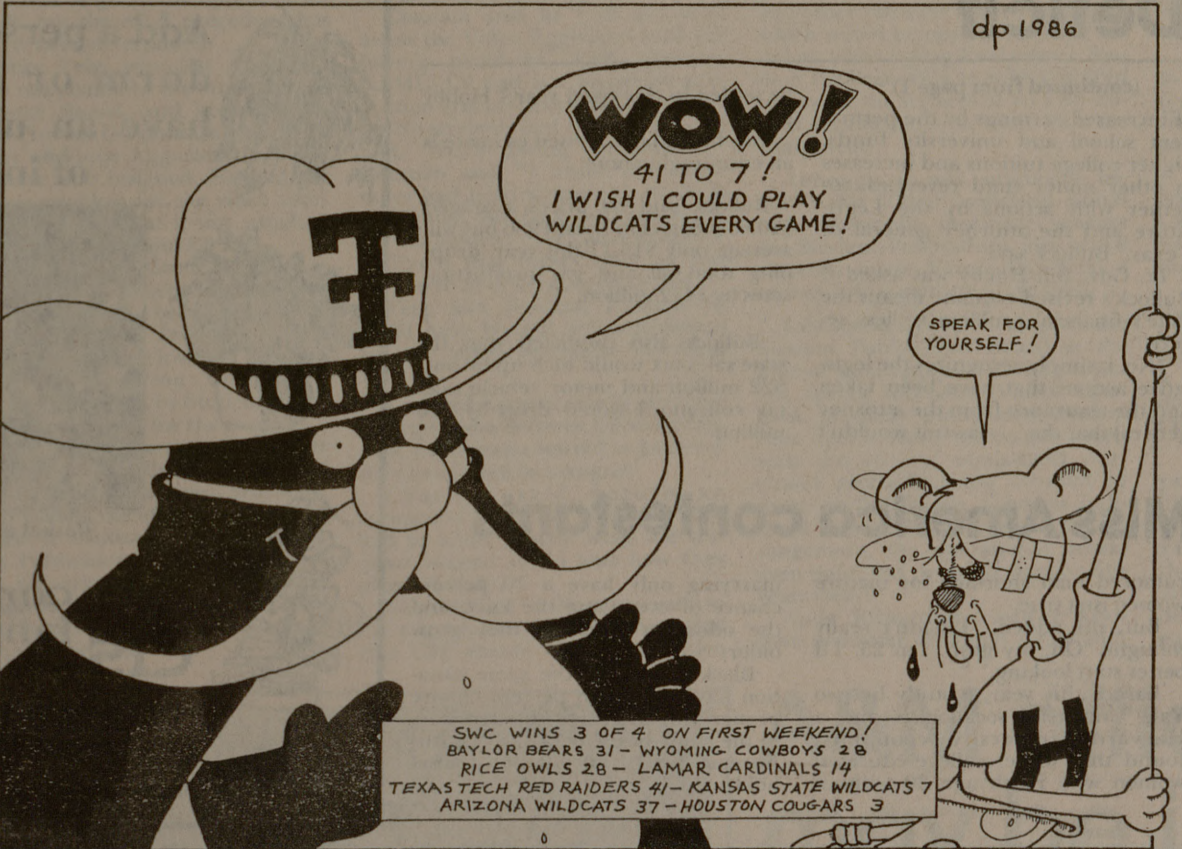

From Sherrill's standpoint, the Aggie offense will have to contend with a tough unit of senior down linemen — left end Roland Barbay, nose guard Henry Thomas and right end Karl Wilson.

"They're physical up front," Sherrill said. "What they try to do is tie things up and get Brooks to zero in on the ball carrier. If you're going to score, you're going to have to execute. The teams that have won (against LSU) have been able to run the football. You just can't go back and throw all the time."

The A&M-LSU series will be played for the next 12 years, alternating between A&M and LSU, Sherrill said. He added that Southwest Conference officials will call the games at LSU and Southeastern Conference referees will officiate at Kyle Field.

But this year's renewal could be "classic" because A&M is ranked seventh and LSU fourteenth in the Associated Press football poll. Despite the hoopla, Sherrill said, the Aggies won't concentrate so hard on the opener and forget the remainder of the schedule. "We're going to play hard," he said, "but it's not our only game this year, just the first of 11, hopefully 12."
