A&M-LSU game may invoke 'deja vu'

By Tim Stanfield
Sports Writer

A sense of deja vu will greet A&M football fans when the Aggies open the 1986 football season this Saturday night against the Louisiana State Tigers in Baton Rouge, La.

Eighteen years previous, the last A&M team to have been to the Cotton Bowl opened its season in the same manner.

Coach Gene Stallings' Aggies came to Tiger Stadium on Sept. 20, 1968, carrying with them a seven-game winning streak.

A&M took a 12-0 lead utilizing a safety, two field goals by Charley Riggs and a two-yard touchdown pass from Edd Hargett to Bob Long (plus Riggs' extra point).

Riggs' second field goal set an A&M career record (nine) breaking the old mark set by Mike Clark.

LSU came back to take a 13-12 lead, but the Aggies marched 79 yards to the Tiger one-yard line before disaster struck.

Hargett ran an option left and just as he was about to be hit at the one, he pitched out to Long.

Long was hit hard near the goal line and fumbled the ball into the left corner of the end zone.

He recovered the ball, but it had already gone out of bounds for a touchback.

LSU got the ball at its own 20 and proceeded to run 11 plays, keeping the ball away from the Aggies the rest of the game.

Stunned, the Aggies never regained their 1967 poise and resourcefulness, finishing with a 3-7 record.

Ironically, two years later A&M went to Baton

Rouge and defeated the Tigers 20-18 in a game that had originally been scheduled to open the season.

However, the NCAA had granted its consent to schedule an 11th game if they so desired.

A&M put Wichita State on its schedule one week before playing LSU, the Aggies defeated WSU, 41-14.

That win was the Aggies' first opening win since they beat Maryland 21-13 in 1968.

Wide receiver Hugh McElroy scored the winning touchdown on a 79-yard pass play with 13 seconds left on the clock.

McElroy's touchdown was the first scored by a black player in A&M history.

Unfortunately, the 1970 Aggies would more victories of any kind, losing their season.

Ags fall to Illinois State in volleyball tourney

SAN DIEGO — The Texas A&M volleyball team was on the receiving end of revenge in the San Diego State Tournament Thursday night.

The Aggies, 4-0 and champions of the Illinois State Tournament last weekend, lost to Illinois State in their first match of the tournament, 15-13, 15-11, 15-12.

Illinois State, although 0-4 going into Thursday's game, were aided by the Aggies' poor .112 hitting percentage.

A&M Head Coach Al Givens said he felt the Aggies played flat due to delays in getting to San Diego Wednesday which forced them to miss practice.

A&M was scheduled to play United States International University in a later match Thursday and then Brigham Young University, ranked ninth in Volleyball Monthly, in a match today.

Several nationally ranked programs are among the eight teams in the tournament, which concludes Saturday.

In addition to Brigham Young, host San Diego State is ranked 10th in Volleyball Monthly and Western Michigan, which is ranked 13th in the publication.

Aggie cross country grabs third in A&M Invitational

By Doug Hall
Sports Writer

When Texas A&M Assistant Track Coach Ted Nelson predicted a third-place finish for the Aggie Cross Country team in Thursday's A&M Invitational, he hit the nail right on the head.

The Aggies, paced by David Trevino's fifth-place finish, trailed Houston and Baylor in the team scoring but finished ahead of Blinn Junior College. With the inverse scoring process, Houston totaled 35 points, Baylor 49 and A&M 65.

Trevino's five-mile time of 26 minutes, 42 seconds was 29 seconds behind first-place finisher Stephen Clark of Baylor. Houston's Jim Thorpe placed second with a time of 26:28.

However, Cross Country Coach

Steve Silvey was not dismayed with his young team's effort.

"We ran pretty good for what we've done," Silvey said. "I only get better as the season goes on." Trevino ran way beyond what he has trained for," he said. "I goes to show you his capabilities."

A&M's most promising runner, sophomore Calvin Collins, still is recovering from a serious illness and pulled out of the race before finishing.

In the women's three-mile race the University of Houston dominated the field by posting seven times. Barefoot runner Julie Dekkers led the UH squad with a time of 17:04.

Freshman Julie Soukup was the first Aggie to cross the line to claim eighth place.
