A&M graduate chosen head of art board

Albert H. Coldewey, Class of '63, has been elected president of the Amarillo Art Center Board of Trustees for 1986-87. A managing partner of the Amarillo-Lubbock offices of the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., Coldewey serves as the college relations partner for Texas A&M. He also serves on the Accounting Advisory Council for A&M's College of Business Administration. Along with continuing programs, Coldewey says he would like to bring an exhibit of 10 guest artists of different media to Amarillo. Coldewey says he also plans to emphasize an education program with the Amarillo school district. This program introduces children to art when they're in the sixth grade. Coldewey says he feels it's important to get young people introduced to art early because it broadens cultural horizons. "If you wait until they're 18, 19, 20, they have the feeling that it's kind of snobbish — not real," he says. "If we start early they may find something they appreciate or like — they may even develop an interest."

Byrd retires, ends 36-year career at A&M

Louise Byrd saw lots of changes in Texas A&M over the course of her 36-year career here in the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. Byrd, who retired Aug. 29, said one of the major changes was the transition to include women in the University. "I think maybe for the majority of the male students it was kind of nice to have women around," she said. "I don't think there was quite the competition when they first came in as there is now." Byrd came to Bryan in 1949 with her husband, a teacher in the Bryan public schools. In 1950 she started as a secretary with the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries and retired as an accounting assistant with the department. In 1982 Byrd received the Outstanding Staff Award from the department. But her greatest honor came the following year with the Distinguished Performance Award, given by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station for administrative support. "The Distinguished Performance Award really means so much now because it was presented by Perry Adkisson," Byrd said. Adkisson is A&M's new chancellor. Byrd, who is retiring in Bryan, said now she just wants to relax and enjoy her family life.

A&M vet student honored at convention

Texas A&M veterinary student Greg Hawkins was honored for his achievements in the veterinary school at a reception during the annual American Veterinary Medical Association convention. Representing the University at the four-day convention in Atlanta, Hawkins was honored by the Princeton, N.J., firm Solvay Veterinary, Inc., one of the top suppliers of animal health products. Each year 26 students representing veterinary universities throughout the United States are honored for their achievements at the Solvay-sponsored receptions.

NAACP: Rebel flag bad school symbol

FORT WORTH (AP) — Officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are protesting the use by two schools of Confederate symbols such as the song "Dixie" and the Rebel flag. "We've had complaints from parents and students at both schools," local NAACP chapter president Ray Bell said Wednesday. "It is offensive." Bell said that the NAACP wants the two Fort Worth-area schools to do away with the Rebel flag and anything that would go along with the Rebel theme. Both Southwest and Richland high schools use Rebel mascots in athletic events, sing "Dixie" as their fight songs and display the Stars and Bars on football helmets. Bell said letters demanding a change would be mailed to school board members and superintendents in the Fort Worth and Birdville school districts. "I'm for keeping the Rebel theme," said Dr. Richard O'Neal, president of the Fort Worth school board. "No one here has ever looked at the Rebel symbol as being racist or discriminatory." NAACP members have waged a running battle with Grand Prairie school officials for the past year over South Grand Prairie High School's use of the Confederate flag at athletic events.
