Pasadena bank becomes 17th in Texas to fail in 1986

PASADENA (AP) — Texas Independence Bank of Pasadena was closed Thursday by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., making it the 17th Texas bank to fail this year, officials said.

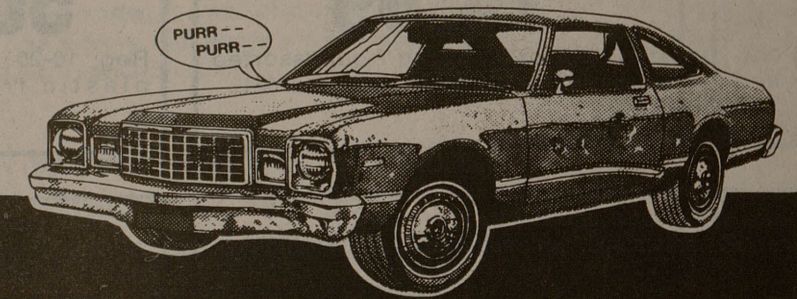

The FDIC board of directors approved the assumption of the deposit liabilities by a newly chartered subsidiary of Citizens Bankers Inc. of Baytown, FDIC spokeswoman Julie Amberson said.

The failed bank's only office will reopen today as The Texas Independence Bank of Pasadena and its depositors automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank, Amberson said.

Texas Independence Bank, with about $12 million in assets, was closed Thursday by Texas Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton and the FDIC was named receiver.

"The bank's assets condition deteriorated over the past several examinations, resulting in a severely weakened capital structure," Sexton said. "A high concentration of poor-quality loans lead to further significant losses, exceeding the remaining capital funds."

The bank's board of directors tendered the failing bank to the commissioner for liquidation, Sexton said.
