Aquino gains honors, visits former home

NEW YORK (AP) — Philippine President Corazon Aquino returned Sunday to her alma mater after visiting the Boston house she shared with her husband before he returned to the Philippines and was assassinated. At the College of Mount St. Vincent, from which she graduated in 1953, Aquino received the school's highest honor, the Elizabeth Seton Medal. She and former classmates met and posed for a class photograph. At a Mass at St. Ignatius Roman Catholic Church in Newton, Mass., Boston College presented her with its highest honor, the Ignatius Medal. Before Mass, about a dozen neighbors stood in the rain in Newton to wave to Aquino when she visited her former home.

Soviet diplomats expelled from U.S., return to U.S.S.R.

NEW YORK (AP) — An Aeroflot jetliner left Sunday carrying the first of 25 Soviet U.N. diplomats ordered expelled from the country by the federal government, which contends the Soviet U.N. mission is used for espionage. Tom Middlemiss, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, said the State Department told port authority police that 21 of the Soviets ordered out of the country would be on the flight. Middlemiss later said there was no way of knowing how many actually left on the Aeroflot jet Sunday. State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said Sunday she had no information on the departures. U.S. officials, charging the Soviets were senior intelligence officers, ordered the Soviets to leave the country by Oct. 1. The Soviet U.N. mission declined to comment on the departures. The FBI, which is responsible for counter-intelligence in the United States, had no information on the departures, said special agent Judy Lewis for the agency's New York office. The officials, most of whom were between 30 and 50 years old, left from John F. Kennedy International Airport at 4:30 p.m. Valentin Karymov, senior counselor at the mission, said in a telephone interview Sunday that all would leave by the deadline.

Weight Room Moved
If you've been looking for the recreational weightroom in the Read Building you won't be able to find it. It has been relocated to DeWare Fieldhouse in the old athletic weightroom. If you quit using the weightroom because of space or lack of machines, check us out now. The weightroom is much larger and many new machines have been added. Hours of operation at 11 AM to 11 PM, Monday through Friday and 12 PM to 7 PM, Saturday and Sunday. For more information, contact the Intramural-Recreational Sports Office at 845-7826.

Sports Official's Association

The backbone of any intramural program is the officiating staff. The Texas A&M Intramural-Recreational Sports Program hires and trains from 300-400 students to officiate in the program. About 315 of these student officials were members of the Sports Officials Association last year.

The Sports Officials Association (SOA) is an organization for officials that officiate in the Intramural-Recreational Sports Program. This organization was designed to develop a special camaraderie among officials. Some of the benefits of membership are receiving officiating equipment free of charge, attending social activities and a chance to officiate for outside organizations.

According to Eric Anderson, President of SOA, officiating has many benefits. It allows individuals a chance to develop decision making skills. "An official has to learn to make an instantaneous decision," says Anderson. In addition, an official must learn to deal with people in adverse situations. "You don't always encounter the 'model' intramural participant. Some of them are at the other end of the spectrum," he says. Anderson, who has been officiating for 4 years, feels his officiating experience will definitely help him in later life.

In addition to offering social activities for its members, the SOA sponsors Preseason Tournaments for flag football, volleyball, basketball and softball. Officials that work these tournaments work for free. The tournaments are used as training tools for the officials. The entry fee for the tournaments goes to support the SOA. Other club officers are Doug Williams, vice-president; Ron Stammann, treasurer; Julie Timms, secretary, and Ken Lawson, social director.

Anyone interested in officiating and becoming a member of SOA can contact Mike Waldron, faculty advisor, or any of the club officers at 845-7826.
