Former Corps commander still missing after collision

From Staff and Wire Reports

BEAUFORT, S.C. — Searchers found two helmets and a life vest Thursday that they believe belonged to a former commander of the Texas A&M Corps of Cadets and another Marine missing since Tuesday when their fighter jet fell into the Atlantic after colliding with another fighter, Coast Guard officials in Miami said.

The search for the two missing men continued into Thursday night. Coast Guard officials said they would re-evaluate their search plans for the men this morning.

The missing men have been identified as pilot, 1st Lt. Charles Kelly Castleberry Jr., 26, Class of '82, of Lake Jackson, Texas; and a radar intercept officer, Maj. Christopher J. Brammer, 37, of Cortez, Colo.

Castleberry was Corps commander in 1981-82, the top-ranking student officer. He received the Brown-Rudder Award, presented to an outstanding graduating senior, and earned a bachelor's degree in agronomy.

The search continues for former Corps commander Charles Kelly Castleberry, following the collision Wednesday of his plane with another off the coast of Georgia.

After graduating with a 3.6 grade point-ratio, he completed flight training in Pensacola, Fla.

Coast Guard officials also reported Thursday receiving some weak emergency location transmitter signals, but were unable to locate the transmitter.

The transmitters are carried aboard planes and are set off during a crash.

Searchers continued to collect debris that they believe is from the fighter jets.

They found what appeared to be oxygen tanks and landing gear. 2nd Class Petty Officer Brian Iledo of the Miami Coast Guard, which is coordinating the search.

Searchers have covered a square miles since the accident, Coast Guard officials said.

The search began Tuesday when two F-4S Phantom II jet fighters crashed off the Georgia coast. What Marine officials called a routine training mission.

The two Marine fliers had another jet — 1st Lt. Steven A. G. 26, of Lamoni, Iowa; and Capt. H. Rives, 28, of Canton, Ga. were picked up shortly after the collision by a fishing vessel.

They were taken to Beaulieu Hospital and released Wednesday.

As the search continued, authorities discussed forming a board to investigate the accident.

Senate bill may boost drug efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pending anti-drug legislation would boost Texas efforts to halt the flow of narcotics with more manpower and equipment, including helicopters, Sen. Phil Gramm said Thursday.

"Our legislation will implement portions of the Operation Alliance plan worked out with the administration earlier," said Gramm, a primary co-sponsor of the bill. "It will bring new clout to Texas in the battle against drugs."

The legislative package authorizes a total of $677.9 million for drug enforcement on the southern border, officials said.

Gramm, R-Texas, said that direct anti-drug benefits to Texas would include three twin-engine pursuit helicopters for the Customs Service. One would be based in Houston, he said.

In addition, three of seven aerostats — balloon-borne, long-range radar systems — would be located near El Paso, Del Rio and Kingsville, Gramm said.

Other aid would include:

- About $15 million in additional funding for increased capability at the El Paso Intelligence Center.

- Creation of three new regional command, control and communications centers, including one at Houston.

Archivist named to Navy advisory board

The Sterling C. Evans Library's University archivist, Dr. Charles Schultz, was appointed to the Secretary of the Navy's Advisory Committee on Naval History in August.

The committee, composed of distinguished historians, librarians, curators and archivists, advises the director of naval history on historical programs. The group also helps in locating individuals and organizations who can contribute to the work of the Naval Historical Center.

Schultz, who has been Texas A&M's University archivist since 1971, previously received the Distinguished Service Award from the Society of Southwest Archivists and was named a Fellow of the Society of American Archivists in 1984.

Schultz is an authority on maritime history. His areas of special interest are whaling, life on 19th century sailing ships, and he is also an authority on the forty-niner trade.

Grad student gets animal science award

Animal Science graduate student Curt A. Terry was named recipient of the 1985-86 Block and Bridle Outstanding Senior Award. Terry, a 1986 graduate of Texas A&M, was selected as the semester winner and received a $300 cash award.

The award was presented during the annual meeting of the American Society of Animal Science held in August at Kansas State University.

Terry was president of the local chapter of Block and Bridle, Saddle and Siroloin, a large agricultural club at A&M.

Seeking his master's in meats and muscle biology, Terry will join the meats judging team in the spring.

2 TAES administrators retire after 30 years

Two Texas Agricultural Extension Service administrators at A&M retired this fall.

Dr. Uel R. Stockard, state leader for county extension programs and Dr. Dempsey H. Seastrunk, assistant director, both retired after more than 30 years with the service.

Stockard, Class of '52, has been state leader since 1976. He was recent recipient of the Texas Superior Service Award from the extension service.

Seastrunk, a graduate of Prairie View A&M, received the Superior Service Award from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1975.
