To tax or not to tax? Students attending a debate Saturday answered that question by voting 68-65 in favor of raising taxes to solve the present Texas budget deficit.

By Nancy D. Wilkins

In the forum debate held in Rudder Tower by the Texas A&M Debate Society, students argued the necessity of a tax increase.

The forum is an "audience-style" debate in which the audience discusses the issue proposed by the principal speakers, who give two-minute opening arguments stating their opinions at the issue. Then the their opinions on the issue. Then the audience members, who are seated according to how they feel about the issue, debate with each other. Those audience members who change their opinions during the debate move to

Anita McDaniel, a speech commu-nications major from Houston, kicked off the debate as the principal speaker against the tax increase, saying that the best solution for solving the immediate deficit problem is to

One of the solutions proposed by McDaniel was to delay state retirement payments until early March. This, she said, would mean the recipients still would get their money, but the state wouldn't have to spend this money until early March.

Another solution, McDaniel said, would be for the state to issue tax anticipation notes that would be issued by the treasury and create money that wouldn't have to be paid until the next fiscal year.

The other principal speaker, Sheryl Perkins, a senior computer science major from Houston, said the only way for Texas to solve its deficit problem is to increase taxes. Perkins argued that cutting state programs isn't practical because Texas already is operating on a very "lean budget."

She cited cuts in higher education as an example, saying universities are labor intensive and deep budget cuts could be disastrous. She also said that lower salaries resulting from budget cuts would force pro-

The House on Saturday voted to move the Texas presidential primary from May to the second Tuesday in March, allowing the state to join in the southern "Super Tuesday" primary.

Eleven southern states already have scheduled their primaries for early March.

Texas now holds its presidential delegate selection on the first Saturday in May in conjunction with the primaries for state offices.

Under the bill that won voice vote approval in the House, all primaries would be held on the second Tuesday in March. The measure now goes back to the Senate with minor amendments.
