Yell leaders speak on A&M traditions during symposium

By Leslie Farguson
Reporter

Head yell leader Marty Holmes said Wednesday that when he came to Texas A&M he was taught traditions and he feels it is his duty to pass these traditions untarnished down to new students.

"Traditions have been lacking and we're trying to get them back," Holmes said.

Speaking at Sully's Symposium, Holmes said one of the biggest problems he has as a yell leader is trying to get people to say "howdy."

He pointed out that the word itself isn't that important, but acknowledging the presence of other people on campus is.

"This is one of our biggest complaints from old Ags," Holmes said.

He was accompanied by three of the four other yell leaders: Troy Ireland, Doug Beall and John Bean.

Holmes also told listeners about Kyle Field rules.

"You cannot have signs or beach balls at Kyle Field," Holmes said. "You also can't bring booze into the stadium."

He reminded listeners that they are not supposed to hiss after Aggie yells.

"That's like hissing at ourselves," he said. "Aggies don't boo either. We're supposed to be above that."

Holmes said it is the former students that seem the most concerned about keeping up tradition.

"I am going to keep getting on my soapbox until things get better," Holmes said.

The symposium is sponsored by Lambda Sigma, a sophomore honor service society, and is held in front of the Lawrence Sullivan Ross statue every Wednesday at 11:50 a.m.

Mauro: Beach cleanup priority for commission

By Leigh Ann Rogers
Reporter

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Wednesday that his office will make clean Texas beaches a major priority with a four-part plan for beach cleanup.

In a press conference at Eastwood Airport, Mauro said the plan includes new get-tough regulations against offshore dumping and will emphasize the commission's "Don't Mess With Texas" slogan.

Mauro said he will tighten regulations against offshore dumping by operators of offshore platforms and seismic boats.

He said that between 75 percent and 90 percent of the state's beach litter is washed ashore from the Gulf of Mexico. He added that only 15 percent can be attributed to dumping from offshore platforms and seismic vessels.

"As land commissioner, I can make a 15 percent difference by making sure that anyone messing with Texas beaches loses their leases," Mauro said.

Mauro said the commission also will work with local and state governments to ensure that visitors don't litter on Texas beaches.

He said the third part of the plan is to gain the cooperation of the federal government and the Gulf states, especially Louisiana, to stop platform dumping outside Texas.

"Texas has about 92 platforms in Texas state waters and 295 platforms in federal state waters," Mauro said. "Louisiana has 3100 platforms in Louisiana state waters," Mauro said.

He used a shoreline map to point out that currents pull the Louisiana trash over to Texas waters.

"The fourth part of the plan — and the most important part — is to work with foreign governments, the Texas Maritime Commission and the United States Department of Agriculture, to curb ocean dumping by international shipping," Mauro said.

This dumping is a problem because of the shipping lanes and the seven ports in Texas, Mauro said.
