Reagan says success at summit depends on government unity

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan appealed to Congress on Tuesday to erase tough restrictions on his nuclear weapons program, arguing that his weekend summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "can only succeed if our government is united."

Two days before flying to Iceland, Reagan summoned Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to a White House breakfast to make a special appeal for lifting House-passed barriers to his arms buildup.

"It is exceedingly difficult for me to enter into discussions with the Soviets when legislative restrictions apply to the very areas that are under negotiations with the Soviets," Reagan told the lawmakers.

"I ask you not to tie my hands," he said. "Don't undermine my negotiating position. Each of you is key to any chance we have of proceeding with a united government. I appreciate very much your efforts to help make this trip a success."

Reagan's comments were relayed to reporters by Larry Speakes, his chief spokesman.

The House has approved a budget measure that would ban nuclear tests, prohibit testing of anti-satellite weapons, require adherence to the SALT II treaty, freeze funding for Star Wars defense and block production of binary chemical weapons. A Senate version of the bill contains no such restrictions.

"I believe very strongly that a meeting of this kind can only succeed if our government is united," Reagan said. "I cannot stress the importance of this enough. I need your bipartisan support. On occasions in the past, where it was clearly in the national interest to unite, we have done so. I have every confidence that we will do so again on this occasion."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex, offered to put off further action on the restrictions until after the Iceland meeting and the regular summit expected to follow later this year.

Speakes said Wright's proposal for delaying any decision was discussed but indicated the White House wants the issue resolved now.

Reagan would like Congress to pass a spending bill for the entire year with appropriate funding levels on domestic and defense spending that would not have restrictions on the president's policy-making abilities in SALT II, nuclear testing and the other areas laid out, Speakes said.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the summit should give additional impulse and guidance for curbing medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia but that reaching an agreement will not be easy.

Committee fears some not emphasizing safety at NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional committee said Tuesday that some people at NASA may still be pushing for an unrealistic number of space shuttle flights, jeopardizing promotion of a safety-first program throughout the agency.

And, the committee said, the space agency may not have the expertise to conduct the shuttle program properly and does not yet understand how or why deficiencies in its testing program went undetected.

"NASA management and the Congress must remember the lessons learned from the Challenger accident and never again set unreasonable goals which stress the system beyond its safe functioning," the House Science and Technology Committee said in a report on the Jan. 28 explosion that killed the shuttle's crew of seven.

Ed Campion, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said officials would not comment until they had seen the report.

NASA has announced that it is aiming for the first post-Challenger liftoff Feb. 18, 1988 and that it will have five flights that year.

The committee, which has oversight responsibility for NASA, said its role is different from the Rogers commission's and that it disagreed with some of that panel's findings.

There was no disagreement with the immediate cause of the accident, a flawed joint in the right booster rocket that allowed hot gases to escape past O-ring seals, eating into the huge fuel tank and setting off the explosion.

Information on the joint design and previous problems with the boosters had been presented to all levels of shuttle management, the committee said. And yet, the report added, NASA and booster maker Morton Thiokol Inc. failed to understand or fully accept the seriousness of the problem.

"There was no sense of urgency on their part to correct the design flaws in the SRB (solid rocket booster)," the report said. "No one suggested grounding the fleet, nor did NASA embark on a concerted effort to remedy the deficiencies in O-ring performance. Rather NASA chose to continue to fly with a flawed design and to follow a measured, 27-month, corrective program."

The committee also said:

- It is concerned that the main shuttle engines "may have inadequate safety margins" and have persistent operating problems. The engines should not be operated at 109 percent of their rated power, as in past flights, but should be restricted to 104 percent.

- New system specifications are needed to overcome inadequacies of the shuttle's landing gear, tire, wheel, brake and nose-wheel steering systems.

- Until NASA understands the deficiencies in its solid rocket motor testing, it "will not be able to protect against a similar breakdown in its system of checks and balances in the future."

- The agency should consider moving its heaviest shuttle payloads to expendable rockets.

Five arrested in attempt on Gandhi's life

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Five men from Sikh-dominated Punjab state have been arrested in connection with the attempt to assassinate Prime Minister Ranjit Singh Gandhi, the United News of India reported Tuesday.

It quoted Punjab police as saying four of the men were from the Sangrur district of southern Punjab, where Sikh extremists are fighting for an independent homeland, and the fifth was a Sikh priest from the Amritsar area.

Officials at the Central Bureau of Investigation, which has been given responsibility for the case, declined comment on the UN report.

A lone gunman fired at Gandhi, 42, Thursday as he was leaving a Hindu prayer meeting in New Delhi. The prime minister was not injured.
