Renfest

course selection, you're offered hot buttered corn on the cob, fried cheese, baked potatoes, fried stuffed jalapenos or old-fashioned onion rings. (Again, this is only a sampling of the selections available).

And then there's dessert.

If you thought your taste buds were persuasive alone, just wait till your sweet tooth starts chiming in. It will cry loudly for Sherwood Forest cheesecake, Henry's tarts, and Friar's fudge cake. It will beg to be buried in Lady Guinevere's Apple dumplings, the king's kone, or the devil's delight.

Once you've indulged, you won't have any problem in finding liquid refreshment to wash it all down. You may begin to worry about your rapidly expanding waistline, but any regret will be swept aside as you remember the King's motto: "Lift up your cares," which loosely translates, "Have a brew and forget about it for a while."

You'll find Renaissance spirits in plentiful supply, from frothy beer to fragrant wine.

You can purchase a fresh coconut shell filled with Pina Colada or Strawberry Daiquiri at Lady Lynn's Luscious Libations. There are also the traditional sodas, tea, and lemonade for those who choose not to partake.

As you eat and drink, and take in the sights and sounds around you, you can't help but be touched by the merriment that surrounds you. You giggle openly when a wandering prince stops to kiss your hand, or chuckle good naturedly when you fall victim to a wench's lustful embrace.

Your senses are alive and thriving on the revelry. You don't have a care in the world, as all your earthly needs are met.

In the Renaissance kingdom you'll even find fulfillment for your sixth sense, if you so desire. Wandering gypsies offer to tell you your fortune, read your palm or sell you love potions — for the right price.

As a matter of fact, you can find just about anything at the Texas Renaissance Festival for the right price. The almighty dollar — or pound in the King's land — speaks loudly and moves quickly. It won't be long before you find your pocket-book depleted of anything that even resembles a greenback.

But the fun is well worth the pretty penny you pay for it, since you are actually buying more than just a good time. When you enter into the Renaissance kingdom, you are transported into a whole new dimension.

The people here talk differently, dress differently, and even think differently. No one cares about what you are wearing, who you are with, or the "D" you made on last week's accounting test.
