Senate impeaches Claiborne

U.S. district judge found guilty on 3 impeachment articles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Thursday convicted U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne of "high crimes and misdemeanors," making him the fifth federal official in history removed from office through impeachment.

Claiborne, a convicted tax evader and federal prisoner, was thrown off the bench at 4:14 p.m. EDT, following adjournment of the first Senate impeachment trial in 50 years.

The chief U.S. district judge for Nevada was found guilty on three of four impeachment articles by the necessary two-thirds majority. He was acquitted on a fourth article, although a majority of senators voted "guilty."

Claiborne, 69, was found guilty on Articles I and II, accusing him of the same willful tax violations that caused a federal court jury to find him guilty in 1984.

Article III, of which he was acquitted, said the judge's criminal conviction alone warranted his removal. Article IV contended his conduct betrayed the judiciary and the nation.

The votes were: Article I, 87-10; Article II, 90-7; Article III, 46-17; and Article IV, 89-8. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, voted "present" on all four counts. However, on count

III, 34 senators joined him in "present" votes.

A conviction on any article would have been sufficient to oust Claiborne from his lifetime job. Until now, he has earned his $78,700 salary while in prison.

Claiborne contended that federal agents and prosecutors he criticized as "a bunch of crooks" were responsible for his court conviction.

He acknowledged that more than $106,000 in income was not reported on his 1979 and 1980 tax returns, but blamed the errors on firms he hired to prepare them.

Former Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., a member of the judges defense team, said after the vote, "I feel the Senate did not give Judge Claiborne the trial he was entitled to. It did not hear one solitary witness before the full Senate."

Cannon referred to the Senate decision to have a 12-member impeachment committee hear all evidence.

Oscar Goodman, Claiborne's attorney, said the Constitution was "bruised if not broken" by the conviction and vowed to continue the legal battle, saying, "I don't know how to quit and my client doesn't know how to quit."

Reagan arrives in Iceland to begin superpower talks

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — President Reagan, vowing to "face the tough issues directly" but frowning on quick-fix deals, arrived in Iceland Thursday night for his weekend superpower summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The president was greeted at Keflevik airport by Iceland's president, Vigdis Finnbogadottir, along with Prime Minister Steingrimur Hermannsson and Foreign Minister Matthias A. Mathiasen.

Given a choice by Gorbachev, who proposed the new round of talks just three weeks ago, Reagan picked the remote island nation on the Arctic Circle in keeping with his desire for a low-key, businesslike session without the media circus that attended his first meeting with a Soviet leader last November in Geneva.

And both sides agreed the talks would be accompanied by a news blackout.

Although Reagan portrayed the meeting in Reykjavik as a private talk between two men, the Soviets were expected to send about 300 in their official party, and the U.S. contingent was likely to be about the same size. More than a thousand reporters, photographers, technicians and support people were ready to cover the hastily arranged summit.

The two men meet for the first time in Reykjavik on Saturday morning, with a second two-hour session scheduled that afternoon and a final meeting set for Sunday.

At a minimum, some U.S. officials have said privately, the United States expects Gorbachev finally to agree on a date for the next summit, which he and Reagan announced last year would be held "in the nearest future." But several administration policymakers suggested the two leaders could leave Reykjavik with the framework of a new accord and new instructions for their arms negotiators in Geneva, designed to produce a treaty ready for signing at the next summit parley in the United States.

South Africa bans foreign funds for anti-apartheid activists' group

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government decreed Thursday that South Africa's largest anti-apartheid coalition cannot receive foreign funds. The group said it expects to be outlawed soon.

President P.W. Botha issued the order against the United Democratic Front under the Affected Organizations Act, which allows him to prohibit foreign funding of political organizations considered to be under foreign influence.

Botha's action froze 100,000 rand

($45,000) in UDF bank accounts, said Azhar Cachalia, its national treasurer. He said more than half the annual budget of "millions of rands" comes from abroad, most of it from Scandinavia.

Cachalia told reporters the multi-racial coalition will challenge the order in court.

He and the UDF president, Albertina Sisulu, are the only members of the 15-member national executive who have not gone into hiding or been jailed under the national state of emergency imposed June 12, Cachalia said.

"This morning's proclamation will certainly hurt the UDF, but not to such an extent that it will be crippled," he said. "We fear that in the next few months we are certainly considering the possibility now that we are going to be banned."

Murphy Morobe, the front's publicity secretary and one of those in hiding, told The Associated Press: "It's part of the whole strategy to begin to emasculate the organization."

Survey shows cocaine use soaring in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans who use cocaine regularly has soared while abuse of most other drugs leveled off in the 1980s, federal health officials reported Thursday.

A government survey conducted in 1985 found that 5.5 million Americans had used cocaine in the previous month, a 38 percent jump from the 4.2 million people reported in a similar 1982 survey.

But the eighth National Household Survey on Drug Abuse found little change in the number who used cocaine at least once in the past year. Their ranks grew only from 11.9 million in 1982 to 12.2 million.

Cocaine users are resorting to the drug more frequently, possibly as they exhaust what Dr. Donald Ian Macdonald, head of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration, called a "grace period" for many young people before cocaine plays havoc with their lives.

Macdonald said the widening use of crack, a potent, smokable form of cocaine, is also cutting short any "grace period."

The survey found 44 percent of youthful cocaine users have smoked the drug freebase. Thirty-eight percent of all those who used cocaine in the month before the survey smoked it.
