Watch out for wounded Bears

By Ken Sury
Sports Editor

Saturday, Oct. 18, 9 a.m.:
"Calling all cars. Calling all cars. Be on the lookout for a group of Bears, wearing green and gold clothes and believed headed from Waco toward College Station."
Analysis
The Bears are believed to be wounded and must be approached with extreme caution.

"They are considered armed and dangerous."
Oct. 18, 2:30 p.m.:
"Attention: Bears have been sighted in Kyle Field. Aggies are gathering at opposite end. It looks like a fight may break out."

Yes indeed, and it should be an all-out Southwest Conference battle when Baylor, 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the SWC, and Texas A&M, 4-1 and 2-0, tangle on Kyle Field Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in a regionally televised game.

Four of the last five games between these two teams have been decided by less than a touchdown and there's every reason to expect this game will go down right to the final second.

A&M will be looking to avenge last year's 20-15 defeat in Waco — its only SWC defeat en route to the Cotton Bowl. Baylor, meanwhile, will be out to prove it's a contender for the SWC championship after last week's 27-21 loss to SMU.

Most sports writers expect this game to be a defensive battle. The statistics seem to indicate this as A&M leads the SWC in pass defense and total defense and Baylor leads the conference in rushing defense.

Both teams also have high-powered offenses, although A&M didn't exhibit it in last week's 19-7 win over Houston. The Bears, led by senior quarterback Cody Carlson, lead the conference in passing and total offense.

Neither defense will be able to stop the other's offense, but the team that contains the other the best will win. And that may be decided in the matchup between A&M's receiving corps and Baylor's defensive secondary.

Baylor boasts an experienced secondary led by All-America free safety Thomas Everett and left cornerback Ron Francis.

A&M senior wide receiver Shea Walker will be respecting the Bear secondary.

"The thing that they do is play very good technically," Walker said. "They make little, if any, mistakes and they have the ability to control the game from the defensive secondary."

Walker, whose 19 catches this season move him into fifth on the A&M career receiving list with 77, said the game will come down to who can execute better.

"It's just mostly us against them," Walker said. "For us to beat them,
