Aggies

Jay Muller recovered a Bear fumble. As lackluster as A&M looked early in the game, Baylor sparked. The Bears jumped to a 14-0 lead behind big plays led by quarterback Cody Carlson.

But then the A&M defense asserted itself. On fourth and goal at the A&M 1, Aggie linebacker Todd Howard stuffed Baylor's Charles Perry to give the ball back to A&M. The Aggies then held Baylor to a field goal on the next series after punt return specialist Rod Harris fumbled a punt which Baylor recovered at the A&M 7.

The A&M defense continued to play tough football from then on. Baylor scored one more touchdown and added two field goals after the 17-0 first-quarter lead, but it earned those points on solid offensive plays and not on A&M defensive miscues.

Further Baylor threats were squelched as the Aggies picked off three Carlson passes. Jeff Holley's interception for A&M with 0:48 left in the game iced the victory.

But it was the return of the A&M offense that keyed the win. While Baylor set up its scores with long yardage plays, the only big gainer for A&M was a 68-yard pass to Harris which put the ball at the Baylor 5.

Murray moved the A&M offense slowly and methodically up the field for the A&M scores.

And on the final touchdown, Murray was at his best, hitting two third-down strikes to tight end Rod Bernstein to keep the drive alive. His last toss of the afternoon was the bobbled catch in the end zone by wide receiver Tony Thompson that

Aggie cross country teams grab 3rd, 4th

The Texas A&M men's cross country team took third place in a 10-team field at the UTSA Invitational Cross Country Meet Friday. A&M finished with 55 points, while Houston Baptist won the meet with 42. The Aggies' top performer was Calvin Gaziano, who placed fifth in the five-mile race with a time of 25 minutes, 1 second. The A&M women's squad also fared well, placing fourth in an eight-team division. The Aggies scored 81 points, finishing behind the University of Texas-San Antonio, 30 points; Rice, 38; and Southwest Texas State, 78 points.

A&M's Kelly Madison was the Aggie top finisher in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 17:28, good enough for ninth place.

A&M will host the 18-team Aggie Invitational Thursday at the A&M Golf Course.

Broncos hope to stop well-oiled New York Jet machine

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Denver Broncos don't need long memories. They need think back only to last December for motivation. The Broncos, the leaders in the AFC West, are 6-0, and each victory is another step toward making the playoffs, something they failed to do despite being 11-5 last season. That was the best record for a non-playoff team in NFL history. "It's a big incentive," said quarterback John Elway, who leads the Broncos into Giants Stadium Monday night against the 5-1 New York Jets, the leaders in the AFC East. "We look back and realize you can control your own destiny." The Broncos have moved in a positive direction all season behind a defense which ranks first in the NFL against the run, allowing only 2.9 yards per carry. The offense has scored 179 points, tops in the league after six games. "We've won with a balanced attack, especially the last four weeks," said Elway, who ranks third in the AFC, just behind Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien, in passing efficiency. "The idea is to have that again this week, to keep playing the same kind of football we've been playing." For Elway, that means handing off to Sammy Winder, the third-ranked rusher in the conference with 402 yards — just behind the 409 of New York's Johnny Hector — and finding a strong group of receivers, which will be bolstered by the return of speedy Vance Johnson. Elway has thrown for 11 touchdowns and only two interceptions. O'Brien, the leading passer in the NFL last year, missed the Jets' victory last week at New England because of a left knee injury. He is expected to start Monday night, wearing a brace. "I don't think the brace will be a factor," said O'Brien, who has thrown for 1,449 yards in five games. "If I'm playing, it won't hinder me. If I'm not playing, it certainly won't hinder Pat (Ryan)." O'Brien will be up against a defense which has a league-high 24 sacks, led by defensive end Rulon Jones with an NFL-leading seven. The Jets yielded 62 sacks of O'Brien last year, but have clamped down this season. Hector has been sensational filling in for injured Freeman McNeil, who missed four games with a dislocated right elbow but was reactivated for this game. Hector has rushed for more than 100 yards each of the past two games. Jets' Al Toon leads the NFL with 39 receptions. With the kind of pass defense the Jets have shown — they caught 16 passes this season — Toon might succeed with passes more than runs. "He also has that extra dimension of scrambling," Jets coach Walt Walton said. "Elway is very
