Red Sox happy to be home at Fenway

Boston accustomed to beating the odds

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, coming home after sweeping the first two games of the World Series in New York, are tired of outsiders calling them outsiders.

"We don't pay any attention," American League batting champion Wade Boggs of the Red Sox said. "We were picked to finish fifth coming out of spring training. Then, they picked us to fold after the All-Star break, and then we were supposed to fold when we started playing in our division.

"We were supposed to lose the playoffs, and then we were supposed to lose the World Series. So, what's next?"

The Red Sox beat the heavily favored Mets 1-0 and 9-3 in the first two games of the Series at Shea Stadium. Only one team, last year's Kansas City Royals, has come back to win a Series after losing the first two games at home.

"Losing two at home and then going to the other ballpark is rough," Mets pitcher Ron Darling said. "We were pretty down after losing the second game. But we can turn it on if we have to, and we have to."

The third game of the best-of-seven Series will be played tonight at Fenway Park, with Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 16-10, going for Boston against Mets left-hander Bob Ojeda, 18-5, who was traded by the Red Sox to New York last November. Darling will come back on three days' rest to pitch Game 4.

Boston Manager John McNamara announced Monday that right-hander Al Nipper, 10-12 during the regular season, will start Game 4 for the Red Sox. Nipper was bypassed during previous postseason play because the Red Sox went to a three-man rotation.

While the Red Sox are aware they were considered underdogs, Boggs said the appellation never fit.

"Sure, we've been slighted," Boggs said Monday as the club prepared to work out. "And here we are two up in the World Series. Something's wrong. Somebody doesn't know too much about baseball, or we've fooled everybody."

"(Las Vegas can put the odds up on the board and stick 'em," said Boggs, who hit .357 during the season and had two doubles in Sunday's victory. "The odds don't hit or field or tell you how much heart a team has."

No team ever has lost the first three games and come back to win a seven-game series. The Mets realize the seriousness of the situation but do not consider it hopeless.

"It's the same situation as Kansas City last year," Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said, "so we know it can be done . . . These two games have been uncharacteristic of us."

The Mets' offensive problems had Manager Davey Johnson worried enough to make some lineup changes in Game 2, but not enough to hold a workout on Monday, an off day.

"The club is a little tired, as our performance on the field has shown," Mets pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre said when asked why the workout was cancelled.

Stottlemyre said the Mets were familiar with Fenway Park from an exhibition game they played here Sept. 4.

Sunday night, Johnson replaced third baseman Ray Knight with Howard Johnson and left fielder Mookie Wilson with Danny Heep, either of whom could be the designated hitter Tuesday night against Boyd. Johnson went 0-for-4, although he hit one to the wall in right field in the fourth inning, and Heep was 0-for-2 with a walk.

Stottlemyre, speaking at a Monday news conference for Johnson, said Knight would be back at third and Wilson in left for Game 3 with Heep as the designated hitter. The DH is being used, for the first time in this series, only in the American League park.

The Red Sox had 18 hits, two short of the World Series record, against Mets ace Dwight Gooden and four relievers Sunday night.

Early onslaught lifts New York past Denver

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ken O'Brien threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Wesley Walker and an unyielding New York defense shut down Denver's high-scoring offense as the Jets defeated the previously unbeaten Broncos 22-10 in an NFL game Monday night.

O'Brien, who missed New York's last game against New England with a knee injury, came on late in the second period after Pat Ryan was sacked by Denver's Karl Mecklenburg. On his second play, O'Brien found Walker speeding down the right sideline behind safety Dennis Smith for the touchdown that made it 20-0.

By then, the Jet defense had established its dominance. Ranked fourth in the NFL against the rush — Denver led the league — the Jets never allowed the Broncos to get moving.

Although it sputtered in the second half, the Jets offense already had put the game out of reach. Led by Ryan, the Jets put together time-consuming marches of 65, 56 and 49 yards in the first half.

Pat Leahy kicked field goals of 27 and 25 yards, giving him 22 consecutive successful kicks, one short of the NFL record set by Washington's Mark Moseley.

Johnny Hector ran one yard for a touchdown to account for New York's other touchdown. It was Hector's seventh of the season, tying him for the NFL lead with New England receiver Stanley Morgan.

With 30 seconds remaining in the half, Elway was sacked by cornerback Bobby Humphery in the end zone for a safety, making it 22-0.

Rich Karlis barely made a 47-yard field goal early in the third period, then Elway got the Broncos to the New York 8. But he was intercepted by a diving Kyle Clifton at the one end that threat and the Jets had little trouble the rest of the way.

No budget cuts planned for women's athletics

A&M women's sports try to increase funds

By Molly Pepper
Reporter

Although women's athletics at Texas A&M hasn't had its funding cut, the Athletic Department is working to generate more funds and cut back on its spending, Assistant Athletic Director for Women Lynn Hickey said.

Women's athletics receives $1.38 million from the athletic department and the University, but the program probably doesn't generate $10,000, Hickey said. Women's athletics is working on generating ticket sales through promotion of their contests, she said.

Hickey, who also is the A&M women's basketball coach, said women's athletics rearranged some staff positions and budgets and pulled in money from different areas to hire a full-time promotions person strictly for women's athletics.

In previous years, promotions for women's athletics was done by the coaches, assistant coaches and athletes. With a full-time promotions person, Hickey said she hopes everyone will be able to do a better job and women's athletics will get more recognition.

Money had been added to the women's athletics funds over the last few years, but Hickey said those were to cover the increased cost of scholarships and travel expenses. Otherwise, the budget basically has remained level, she said.

Hickey said the only programs that usually produce revenue at a major university are football, men's basketball, baseball and sometimes women's basketball.

Women's basketball at A&M generates money from ticket sales but nothing compared to what it's given in funding from the Athletic Department and University, she said.

Sports that have television revenues, such as football and basketball, are where the money is involved, she said. She added this is especially true this year as an average of 62,000 tickets are being sold per A&M football game.

"As long as we're just having crowds of 500 to 1,000 people at our contests for volleyball and basketball we're not going to be able to make a large amount of money," she said.

Although the situation is not perfect for women's athletics, they are in good shape financially, Hickey said.

"The thing that we're looking for is some budgets to do some things promotionally and to be able to hire some more staff," she said. "Some of our coaches do not have assistants and some of the assistants we have are graduate assistants and aren't getting paid very much."

"As far as a base to operate off of, I think most of our teams are well funded for travel and equipment. You always want to add to it, but at the same time I think we're in a positive position."

Besides trying to generate funds, women's athletics has also tried to cut back on expenses.

"We've talked to the coaches about concentrating on recruiting in-state because it is less expensive," she said. "And then once you sign the students it doesn't cost as much scholarship-wise."

Women basketball players and some athletes in other sports are on full scholarships. Because tuition is four and one-half times more expensive than for resident students, it is significantly cheaper to recruit athletes within Texas.
