Best Bets

Although the gridiron action in Kyle Field may not be as exciting (or as nerve-racking) as last week's game, the halftime action promises to make up for it.

The MOB is coming to College Station.

For the uninitiated, the MOB, or Marching Owl Band, is famous for halftime shows that are silly, outrageous and downright looney. The MOB is out to have a good time, and they make sure their audience does, too.

The MOB's rendition of "Louie, Louie" is a classic. But if you want a little different style of live music this weekend, head out to one of these spots to hear some great tunes.

RHA Halloween moving out of dorms, into Grove

Bubble, bubble, toil and trouble and gin,

It's almost time to haunt the A&M campus again.

Break out your sheets, and scissors and beer,

Aggie Halloween is almost here.

October has arrived in usual fall fashion, bringing with it cool temperatures, midterms and Halloween — that late, great celebration of spooks and spirits.

But the spook night fesivities are going to be a little less than traditional this year, as the Residence Hall Association moves the celebrations out of the dorms and into the Grove.

In case you haven't heard, RHA isn't sponsoring dorm-to-dorm trick-or-treating this year, due to problems with litter, underage drinking and hell-raising from intoxicated student ghosts.

Instead, the association has opted to host a Halloween party at the Grove

Thursday, October 30. The RHalloween festivities will be highlighted by yell practice for the SMU game, but will also include a costume contest and free refreshments.

If you haven't started gathering your ghoulish attire, then it's time to get your act in gear. With a little imagination even the most drab clothing can be transformed into a Halloween costume that will scare even the most courageous co-eds.

Final weekend for Texas Prison Rodeo

This weekend is your last chance to watch Texas convicts go from prison bars to bucking broncos. The Texas Prison Rodeo in Huntsville, now in its 55th year, will close for the year after the Oct. 26 performance.

In fact, prison officials have considered closing the rodeo permanently, so this may your last chance period.

Country music duo The Judds will perform the last show of the rodeo.

Tickets, which are $7 and $8, are available at Ticketron outlets or from the TDC. Proceeds from the rodeo go to prisoner rehabilitation programs.
