Market posts moderate gains after late sales

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market weathered some late selling to post a moderate gain for the second straight session Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 15 points at its midsession high, closed with a 3.65-point advance at 1,845.47. The average rose 9.56 on Monday.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 145.87 million shares, against 133.24 million the day before.

The market has been moving erratically upward for the past several weeks, recovering some of the ground it lost in its early-September selloff.

Analysts say there has been no dominant theme or groups in the advance.

But many individual issues have responded briskly to news or rumors of impending takeovers or corporate restructuring moves and better-than-expected third-quarter earnings reports have stirred interest in a variety of issues.

Cancer Institute plan seeks to halve death rate by 2000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cancer Institute said Tuesday that the aggressive use of existing knowledge could cut the annual cancer death rate in half by the year 2000.

The institute released a plan — combining cancer prevention, screening, early detection and treatment — that it said could produce dramatic results by the turn of the century if it were adopted as a national goal.

"Knowledge gained over the years can be used to control a significant portion of the disease which was responsible for an estimated 462,000 deaths in 1985," said Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, director of the institute.

Detailed in a new report entitled "Cancer Control Objectives for the Nation: 1985-2000," the plan calls for stepped-up efforts against cigarette smoking and poor diet and earlier use of the latest diagnostic and treatment techniques.

Dr. Edward Sondik, an NCI official who helped analyze and edit the report, stressed the point that the time to fight cancer is now.

"The thing that we are addressing with this report is that you can do something about cancer now without waiting for some research breakthroughs," he said.

"Research is important and we stress that," he said. "The projections we have on reducing cancer death rely to a great extent on the products of past and future research.

"But we think there has been a sense that cancer is a problem we can't get a hold of, that we as individuals can't do much about it and that just isn't true."

The strategy, developed to meet national disease prevention objectives established by the Department of Health and Human Services, would require cooperation from the public, industry, health professions, news media and government to succeed, DeVita said.

Among other things, it calls for industry to increase health promotion in the workplace and the news media to better spread information about cancer prevention and control.

The national mortality rate from cancer in 1980, based on the latest available data, was 183 deaths per 100,000 persons annually.

This figure could be cut by as much as 50 percent in 15 years by using the prevention and treatment knowledge already available, NCI officials said.

Sondik said in an interview that there is no estimate of how much the expanded anticancer effort would cost.

"We have not done a detailed budget, . . . but once one understands what can be done, then they can determine how to do it," Sondik said.

He noted that 30 percent of cancer deaths are due directly to smoking, but that the public doesn't fully understand how much can be gained just by stopping this practice.

The report said 54 million, or 36 percent of adults, smoke daily and that this number has to be reduced to less than 15 percent to cut the incidence of smoking-related cancers by the year 2000.

It noted that while male smoking was dropping, women were picking up the habit and female lung cancer rates may exceed those of men by the turn of the century.

The plan recommended that people reduce the amount of fat in their diets to less than 30 percent of total calories and up the daily consumption of fiber by eating more fresh fruits, grains and vegetables.

It also called for raising from 15 percent to 80 percent the number of women aged 50 to 70 who undergo annual breast physical exams combined with X-ray mammography.

This could reduce breast cancer mortality by 30 percent in this group, it said.

The report prescribed an increase from 79 percent to 90 percent in the number of Pap smear tests given every three years to detect cervical cancer in women 20 to 39 years old.

This testing frequency should increase from 57 percent to 80 percent in women in the 40 to 70 age group.

Man calls cruelty claims 'exaggerated'

BOSTON (AP) — An exhibitor charged with cruelty after officials seized two of his camels on a New Hampshire farm and an elephant in a Massachusetts parking lot said Tuesday is the victim of fanatics.

Brian Watson, 42, who owned and operated the Atlantic Coast Camel Co. in Essex for 15 years, is charged with animal cruelty and stealing last month by the Animal Rescue League of Boston.

League officials say members of the Essex farm found camels in poor conditions, cramped quarters and sick and dying animals.

"This is the worst animal cruelty I've seen in my life with the league," said Robert Bryant, the league's president and state officer. "Some of the animals were in pretty rough shape and their quarters were filthy. We have witnesses who have seen beating the animals."

But Watson said league officials and inspectors for the Department of Agriculture have some minor problems with the camels and cowboys and blew them out of proportion.

"It's fanatical," he said. "I go to your house and find your dog tipped his water and say you're cruel."

food aid delivered to Ethiopia be accounted for. It was also asserted in that the famine was caused by a lack of incentives for farmers, who consequently only plant what their families are laying aside no surplus at times. Berhanu denied that the income could be traced to the government's agricultural policies.

cattle disease called trypanosomiasis spread by the tsetse fly, localized pest infestations, hailstorms and flooding, and the lack of good roads to get food to hungry people.

In November 1984, the Marxist government began an ambitious program to resettle about 1.2 million people, moving them from the drought-prone north to the more fertile south and west.

Berhanu said 600,000 people were resettled by late February 1986, when the program was suspended — at least partly because of Western criticism that it was poorly planned and that thousands of people, flown from the highlands to swampy lowlands, had died of malaria and other diseases.

The relief and rehabilitation commissioner dismissed the critics as politically motivated and said the program would continue after a period of "consolidation."

"We have saved thousands of lives," Berhanu said of resettlement. Despite some Western allegations of food manipulation and diversion of aid to the army, the U.N. emergency office estimated 95 percent of all
