Ag commissioner hopeful stresses producer profits

By Frank Smith
City Editor

Sizing up the race for Texas agriculture commissioner as a choice between leadership and showmanship, challenger Bill Powers brought his campaign to Texas A&M this week.

In an interview with The Battalion, Powers, R-Austin, attacked the policies of incumbent Democrat Jim Hightower.

While acknowledging Hightower as "probably the most colorful and quotable figure in Texas politics," Powers characterized the commissioner as an ambitious showman who is lightly regarded in agricultural circles.

"His No. 1 priority is headlines for Hightower," Powers said. "Mine is profits for producers."

Powers, A&M Class of '64, has served as executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Federation since 1969. Prior to that he was an editor of the Farm Bureau's Texas Agriculture magazine.

He said Hightower broke promises to lower consumer food bills and stop farmers from going broke, and that the commissioner's "supply management" farm program has been rejected.

Powers criticized Hightower for advocating mandatory production controls.

"It takes away the incentive for you to do better than me," Powers said.

He said the program has little legislative support because it's one of socialized agriculture.

"It's the first step toward government telling you everything," Powers said. "It will put prices through the ceiling and take us totally out of the world market."

Powers also spoke sharply of Hightower's refusal to cut the department's budget when Gov. Mark White requested 13 percent cuts from each state department in February.

He added that when the Legislature convened for its sessions, Hightower attempted to $400,000 from the production fund without first discussing it with the people who pay into it.

"They tried to sneak it through. I really doesn't care about farm," Powers said. "It just goes to show that those in the produce industry."

Powers said he has the support of 85 percent to 90 percent of the production agriculture.

"But we also know agriculture is not a very big percentage of the population," he said. "Those involved in agriculture are more likely to be fooled by (Hightower's) cal rhetoric."

Bentsen campaigns for Geren, proposes tougher trade policy

By Mona Palmer
Assistant City Editor

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen stopped at Easterwood Airport Thursday to campaign for Democratic congressional candidate Pete Geren.

Bentsen said Geren, who's opposing incumbent 6th District Rep. Joe Barton, is a fiscal conservative who won't be so rigid in his views that he'll have only one vote in the House.

"Geren will not drive people off with his ideologies," Bentsen said, "but persuade them with his reason."

Bentsen also discussed the trade deficit, which is expected to reach $180 billion this year.

The Japanese have bought American securities and that has pulled the nation through, Bentsen said, but that won't solve the problem.

"We should be grateful that they're buying those securities," he said, "but we have to understand that this is no Marshall Plan they have in mind. They expect to be paid back."

"What we want is a trade policy and legislation that will break down the barriers to our products — that will let us sell our products abroad."

Bentsen said American companies are forced to compete with other nations as well as private businesses since, in many countries, the national government controls business.

Geren said he proposes a get-tough trade policy that would punish foreign countries that use subsidies and tariffs to obtain unfair advantages in the international market.

"Those subsidies and tariffs are costing the 6th District jobs," he said, "and that's got to come to a screeching halt."

Jeff Crosby, spokesman for Geren, spoke of the closing of the International Shoe Plant, which he said cost Bryan-College Station 250 jobs.

The effect of the job losses ripples through the economy, he said. The neighborhood store next to the factory won't do as well, and the stores at which the workers shop will be affected, he said.

A&M receives equipment for research

The Department of Energy donated research equipment valued at more than $500,000 to Texas A&M, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm announced Saturday.

The equipment has been loaned to the University and completion of an eight-year shore oceanographic research program in support of the Energy Department's Strategic Petroleum Reserve Program.

The offshore monitoring program was a multi-departmental project involving personnel in chemical engineering, oceanography, and fisheries and the marine science program at Galveston.

The DOE originally planned to auction the equipment to Roy W. Hann, the company engineer and program manager on the oceanographic research project, contacted Barton to see if he could secure the equipment for A&M.

Barton contacted Geren, they negotiated with the DOE the donation of the equipment.

The donation includes 200 items of equipment from offshore current-measurement systems and biological sampling gear to laboratory analysis equipment and scopes.

ON THE ROAD AGAIN.

When Judges Frank Evans and Bud Warren go on the road, they get down to business. Because both were instrumental in creating a program which brings justice to the people.

For the first time in Texas, appeals cases are being heard in the county where they were filed. Your county. A move that has unclogged the courts and saved countless tax dollars.

On Tuesday, November 4, vote for leadership and dedication on the bench. Re-elect Chief Justice Frank Evans and Associate Justice Bud Warren to the First Court of Appeals. Experience at work on your behalf.
