"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," is one of the best bets in entertainment for next week. But for this weekend, we have some bad news.

A funny thing did not happen to one of the clubs featured in Best Bets.

Due to a fire that damaged MC2 last weekend, that club is moving back to its original spot at Eastgate Live's location on Walton Drive. Consequently, Eastgate Live won't exist for a while and won't have bands until the Harvey Road location of MC2 is repaired.

Reach for the stars in Southwood Valley

Four nights a year the Bryan/College Station community is granted the opportunity to reach for (and beyond) the stars. Tonight is one of those nights.

The Association of Amateur Astronomers (AAA) is sponsoring Community Star Night tonight, complete with an assortment of telescopes and guides to the galaxies.

The group will set up 6-, 8- and 10-inch telescopes at the Southwood Athletic Complex in Southwood Valley for the star-gazing convenience of the local community.

Members of the club will be on hand to point out various heavenly points of interest, and the city will get in on the act too, turning out the lights in the surrounding area to maximize would-be astronomers' viewing pleasures.

Community Star Night is open to the public and will take place from dark until midnight. There is no charge for viewing, but donations are accepted by the club for maintenance of telescopes and other equipment.

Laurie Hazen, vice president of the AAA, says that turnout for the quarterly event has ranged from around 30 visitors on a cloudy summer night to well over 2,000 when Halley's Comet was in view.

There are no guarantees on tonight's weather (after all, this is College Station), but Hazen says Star Night will be rescheduled a week from today if viewing is not possible.
