Courses

make an A in Human Sexuality, don't tell your parents. If you make a D, don't tell your squeeze.

Sorry, this one doesn't have a lab.

Journalism 102: American Mass Media, three credits.

Unlike most journalism classes, this one doesn't require a lot of writing. You'll learn about the various forms of mass media and find out exactly how much the media affects your life. In some majors, Journalism 102 counts as a social science elective, so it's worth looking in to.

Although only 6 percent of the grades were A's, more than 80 percent were B's and C's. It must be kind of tough to flunk this one.

One of the best things about this class is that it meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 11 a.m. Even the most notorious bag rats should be able to get out of bed by then.

Oceanography 205: Introduction to Ocean Studies, one credit.

There's more to the ocean than what you see at Padre Island during Spring Break. Learn about the currents, the mineral content and the wildlife of the ocean.

This class offers an interesting option to the conventional full-semester class schedule. You can complete this class in five weeks by attending class three times a week.

Philosophy 111: Contemporary Moral Issues, three credits.

According to the distributions, the average grade in this class is a B, and rumour has it that it's pretty tough to flunk. Even the course title sounds like it's a cool, mellow, easy-going class, unless you sign up for Jerry Falwell's section.

Veterinary Public Health 404: Food Toxicology & Safety, three credits.

Are you one of those obnoxious people who talks about the large amount of cow feces found in dairy products while your friends are trying to enjoy a milkshake? Boy, have we got a class for you.

VTPH 404 will provide all the ammunition you'll need for your tableside attacks on food. You'll learn about rat hair in hot dogs and toxins in spinach and all sorts of nasty things most people just don't want to know about.

In addition to those major attributes, this class has a low failure rate and it doesn't start until 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Good thing. You sure wouldn't want to face this class right after breakfast.
