Fred Akers that appeared in a Houston football magazine accompanied by a "salute from the University of Texas to all Greater Houston high school football teams."

NCAA rules prohibit promotional material in a setting that could be used to help recruiting.

The picture of Akers appeared in a Houston recruiting magazine advertisement purchased by an oil company without UT's knowledge, the American-Statesman reported.

• An allegation by the Ohio State University golf coach that members of the UT golf team had participated in a tournament where the winners competed for money from an overall pool of $100,000. Collegiate golfers can't earn money at their sport under NCAA rules.

Black said the NCAA discovered that many collegiate golfers were involved in gambling tournaments but found no proof that any Longhorns accepted money.

• A complaint that the University of Florida allowed swimmers to train in its summer programs before they enrolled in school.

UT reported the allegations about the Florida swimming program to the NCAA in 1983. UT women's athletic director, Donna Lopiano, who signed the letter, said her last contact with the NCAA was about 1½ years ago.

Ex-player claims SMU coaches paid him after NCAA sanctions

DALLAS (AP) — A former Southern Methodist University football player says he was paid to play football after the NCAA imposed sanctions on SMU for recruiting violations and warned that a future violation might result in the suspension of the athletic program.

David Stanley said he received a cash payment of $25,000 to sign with SMU and monthly payments of $750 after SMU was cited with recruiting violations in August 1985.

The former linebacker made the statements to television station WFAA, which broadcast its report Wednesday night.

Stanley said Henry Lee Parker, administrative assistant to SMU athletic director Bob Hitch, made monthly payments of $400 to him and $350 to his mother until Stanley dropped out of school in December 1985.

But school officials denied Stanley's allegations.

"I know that I haven't paid him," said Hitch.

"I received $25,000 to attend SMU and 'Bootsie' Larsen paid me," said Stanley.

P.J. "Bootsie" Larsen, a former assistant coach, left SMU on Aug. 31, 1985. Stanley claimed that after Larsen left SMU, Henry Lee Parker, administrative assistant to Hitch, made the monthly payments to him and his mother.

"I never met his mother and father," said Parker. "I had no involvement with the... family at all."

Larsen refused to comment but said, "You're taking the word of a kid."

SMU received a three-year probation for recruiting violations in the football program including total booster disassociation for two years, a ban on TV and bowl games for one year, and a reduction in scholarships. The probations ends Aug. 16, 1988, but all sports programs at SMU must avoid a major violation through August 1990.

Blackman's 10-point burst sparks Mavs past Rockets

DALLAS (AP) — Rolando Blackman, who scored 31 points in Dallas' 114-85 victory over the Houston Rockets Wednesday night, said things didn't look good for the Mavericks when they were down by 10 points early in the second quarter.

"It was very tough," Blackman said. "We were trying to put points on the board and in the early going, it just wasn't working out. We had gotten in a bad state of mind."

Blackman wanted to do something about, so he went out and scored 10 straight points in a Dallas rally in the second quarter to give the Mavericks the lead.

"We started pressing a little and things like Tuesday night's game (a 104-103 loss at Utah) started creeping into my mind," Blackman said. "I started asking for the ball and I just got into a good flow offensively. In those situations where you are asking for the ball, you want to be able to hit."

"Once I got started, I showed I could hit and they kept getting me the ball," Blackman said.

Dallas, 4-3, trailed Houston 40-30 with 5:55 left in the second quarter, but Blackman scored 12 points in the Mavericks' 17-0 run to lead Dallas to a 47-40 lead before Akeem Olajuwon scored with 1:43 left in the half.

The Mavericks, who led 52-48, at halftime, continued their assault in the third period, outscoring Houston 32-20 to take a 84-68 lead entering the final quarter.

Houston, 4-2, got a game-high 32 points from Olajuwon. But the Rockets could never get closer than 15 points in the fourth period.
