Wacker says beating A&M could ease tough season

By Homer Jacobs
Assistant Sports Editor

Texas Christian Head Coach Jim Wacker said in a telephone hookup Tuesday that he would like to win Saturday's game against Texas A&M more than any other Southwest Conference game for many reasons.

First, Wacker pointed to the fact that A&M was the frontrunner in the SWC, and a win against the Aggies could only help recruiting and off-season attitudes for the Horned Frogs.

But much has been written and said about the "bad blood" that exists between Wacker and A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill.

In last year's 53-6 A&M victory, an apparent inside kick by the Aggies, who were leading TCU 46-0, helped fuel the fire between the two schools and the two coaches.

Wacker said he believes the kick was an inside attempt, but said the controversial play has not surfaced in any conversations between him and his players.

Sherrill said the play was not an inside kick at his press conference Tuesday.

"When we kick an inside kick," Sherrill said, "the ball will be kicked 10 yards across the field, at an angle, with everybody on that side going after the ball."

The kick at TCU was high and traveled much farther than the usual inside attempt.

Wacker also may want the win against A&M to silence critics who have doubted his team's performance this season. Sherrill has said TCU might have the most talent in the conference despite the Frogs' dismal 1-6 conference record.

Wacker said his team's injury problems have caused most of TCU's woes, not underachievement by his players.

"I'd like Coach Sherrill to take three of his top players and three top defensive players and redshirt them," Wacker said. "Take (Kevin) Murray out of the lineup, take all of his starting (running) backs out of the lineup, a couple of his top receivers ers out of the lineup and take out about 11 kids out with injuries and three of the other top players, (and) find out how many games A&M would have won this last year. It's kind of easy to pop off about the talent that other people have.

"Maybe that tells you more about Jackie Sherrill than about our program. It's awfully easy to criticize when you're sitting at the top of the heap."

Sherrill said everyone, including coaches, will have different opinions and philosophies, especially in a conference with eight member schools in one state.

"I don't have time to talk about people," Sherrill said. "If people have a problem with us, that's their problem, not our problem."

On the field, the Horned Frogs are 23-point underdogs, and Wacker said a maximum effort by his players is necessary for a possible upset.

"The kids are going to have to heal up," Wacker said. "And obviously we're going to have to play better than we have in any ball game the last two years."

"There's no doubt Texas is a much better football team than we are right now."

The question for the Aggie is whether they can rebound the loss to Arkansas.

"I think our football team is to be back," Sherrill said, shown that too many times.

"I don't think it's a mad team. It's a football team that continues to give effort together."

AGGIE NOTES... The team will try to win their 14th consecutive home game Saturday at Baylor. That streak would be the longest in the nation.

TCU has not beaten the Aggies since 1972.

Running back Roger Vick has over 100 yards against Arkansas the fifth time this year. His counterpart, Keith Woodside, set a record for the most pass yards by a running back against the Aggies with 12.

Raycom (Channel 3) will televise the game Saturday with kickoff at 12:04 p.m.

A&M women golfers finish eighth

The Texas A&M women's golf team finished eighth after the final round of the Lady Cardinal Golf Tournament in Beaumont Tuesday.

The Aggies' 965 total was 42 strokes behind Southern Methodist University's 923, which edged Louisiana State University by one stroke for the championship at the Wildwood Golf Course.

Oklahoma shot a 931 to place third, while New Mexico State had a 943 and host Lamar shot 944. Texas Christian and North Texas State were tied at sixth out of the 11-team field with a 948.

Medalist honors went to Oklahoma's Audrey Bendik, who shot a 3-under-par 70 Tuesday for a par 223 total.

For the Aggies, Fiona Coffey fired a 77 in her final round, 238 total. Mariana Oyenguren shot a 78 to also finish at 238.

Adriana Penuela shot an 81, 246, Dee Davidson scored an 85, and Caroline Basarab shot an 85 to finish at 256.
