Police: Auto exec killed by terrorists

PARIS (AP) — Police said Tuesday they believe two women from the terrorist group Direct Action killed industrialist Georges Besse.

The 58-year-old president of the state-owned Renault automobile company was gunned down on the street outside his home about 8 Monday night. Witnesses said the assailants, two women, approached Besse on foot and escaped the same way. Police said none of the witnesses could provide detailed descriptions of the women.

Pamphlets found in a Paris subway station claimed responsibility in the name of Direct Action, a terrorist group of the extreme left that has carried out numerous other attacks, authorities said. A police spokesman said the printed statements appeared authentic and carried the organization's symbol, a five-pointed star.

Besse had been named president of Renault in January 1985 in hopes of turning the struggling company around. He instituted an austerity program that cost about 22,000 jobs and irritated labor.

Boyle said the nuclear plant is the problem.

"The company's financial problems are almost entirely a function of poor decision-making at the River Bend Nuclear Plant," he said.

Draper, citing an "urgent need for quick action," sent letters to mayors of the 66 cities served by GSU. He asked them to try to get their city councils to act in favor of request by Dec. 15 so the PUC can handle the case by Jan. 1.

Cities have original jurisdiction over electric rates, but the decisions can be appealed to the commission.

"We know that many of our customers are hurting as a result of the area's economic troubles, which also are a major factor in GSU's problems," Draper said.

GSU's problems include an $80 million rate reduction ordered by the PUC in June in response to the company's $134 million rate hike request. GSU agreed to the negotiated decrease when it appeared possible the commission might order a larger decrease.

Witnesses say they saw assault, possible killers of Filipino leftist

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A top justice official said Tuesday that four witnesses reported seeing a roadside assault by men who could have been the killers of prominent leftist leader Rolando Olalia and his driver.

Deputy Justice Minister Silvestre Bello said the witnesses saw men attacking a man early last Thursday along the road where the bodies of Olalia and his driver, Leonor Alay-ay, were found hours later.

Bello said police questioned the witnesses, who said the attackers looked like men in police sketches. A special task force is seeking the killers.

Olalia, 52, headed the militant May 1st Movement, the country's largest union federation, and the leftist Partido ng Bayan, or People's Party.

Bello said the man being attacked could have been Alay-ay and his assailants might have dumped Olalia's body. The bodies were found not far apart on the highway.

Two local newspapers said police suspected the killers were members of a gang of killers hired from nearby Cavite City.

Authorities have released sketches of three men sought in the case but have denied making arrests.

firms the Department of Agriculture decision concerning his own sexual misconduct," he said.

Jones, a Republican, first crossed swords with Mayfield in 1981 after the Reagan administration named Mayfield to replace Jones as executive director of the ASCS Texas office, which oversees federal farm programs.

Mayfield had previously worked under Jones in the office.

Jones continues to collect $10,000 a year in what he has described as "make-work" position in Washington.
