Mistakes

Jr. said Reagan's secret policy of sending arms to Iran was a "terrible decision."
"The American people did not build this country to what it is today so that the arsenal of democracy would become the arsenal of the Ayatollah," he said.
Reagan promised Americans he will sort out details of the controversy.
"I pledge to you I will set things right," the president promised.
"Just cause, deep concerns and noble ends can never be reason enough to justify improper actions or excessive means," Reagan said.
Despite the fact that two of his top National Security Council aides who were involved have invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify before the Senate Intelligence Committee, the president pledged to work with Congress in its investigation.
"We will cooperate fully with Congress as they undertake their review," Reagan said.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North and former national security adviser John Poindexter refused to testify last week at the Senate panel's closed-door hearings.
The administration says North, who was fired, oversaw the money transfers from the arms sale to the Nicaraguan Contras and Poindexter, who resigned, knew about it and didn't try to stop it.
The president, as he has done before, attempted to justify his decision to send arms to Iran by noting that the Middle East is "critically important to our nation's security."
He said his policy was directed at stopping terrorism, halting the Iran-Iraq war and putting an end to the kidnapping of U.S. citizens.
"There was a risk involved," the president said. "But I believed then and I believe now, there was a greater risk in doing nothing, in not trying. So I gave the order to proceed."

3,000 children in Houston get new shoes

HOUSTON (AP) — A drive to provide 3,000 of the neediest students in the Houston Independent School District has been fitted with a promise.
The children and their parents Saturday stood in a line that snaked around a block of the Christmas Shoes for Kids program, sponsored by Adolph Coors Co.
"The kids didn't know what to expect but they all walked away with a smile and a new pair of shoes," said Gail Revis, director of guidance and counseling for the school district.
The school district was able to identify the neediest of 50,000 to 60,000 children enrolled in free lunch programs, she said.
