Shultz: Poindexter assured hostages would be freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a congressional committee that Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter informed him last February that the Americans held hostage in Lebanon would be freed soon and assured him three months later the United States was not swapping arms for hostages, an informed source said Thursday.

Poindexter, who was then President Reagan's assistant for national security affairs, made no mention in the Feb. 28 conversation with Shultz of the fact that U.S. weapons were being shipped to Iran, said the source, who demanded anonymity.

The first of seven American arms deliveries to Tehran was dispatched that month.

In his testimony Wednesday at a closed committee hearing, Shultz said he was assured several times by Poindexter — and also by Reagan — that the United States was not trading weapons for the hostages believed held by a pro-Iranian group.

The disclosure Thursday about what Shultz had been told — coming a day after it was learned he had told the House panel that the administration continued making secret contacts with Iranian representatives as recently as December — sparked new criticism from members of Congress and a pledge by the chairman of a select Senate committee to expand that panel's investigation.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the select committee, said he will expand the probe to include the disclosure of U.S.-Iranian contacts which came even after public disclosure of the earlier contacts, the sales of arms to Tehran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

In early May, while attending the economic summit meeting of seven industrialized countries in Tokyo, Shultz received a cable from Charles H. Price II, the U.S. ambassador to Britain, informing him of a possible U.S. arms deal with Iran for the release of the hostages.

Shultz immediately took concerns to Donald T. Regan, the president's chief of staff, and to Poindexter.

According to the source, Shultz testified that Regan told him he was alarmed and concerned about reported shipments while Poindexter informed Shultz his intention was incorrect.

Afterward, Poindexter and William J. Casey, the director of Central Intelligence Agency, assured Shultz the deliveries had stopped and that those involved had been "ordered to stand down," Shultz told the committee.

Casey said through a spokesman in December, before he was hospitalized for brain surgery, that he did not recall giving Shultz such assurance and that the secretary of state was mistaken. Shultz apparently has raised questions within the committee about the director's version of events.

Crash

sounded like a sonic boom and then saw black objects falling.

"All a sudden, these pieces started hitting the ground, just like hail," he said.

"They started hitting the ground pretty hard and hitting at my feet," Thompson said.

"So I ran and got under a big mesquite tree," he said. "I could see a large wing coming down, floating slowly through the air about a quarter-mile away."

Brownwood Fire Capt. Donald Reiger said "someone zipped when he should have zagged."

The collision left a five-mile-long streak of smoldering debris on the ground.

The Brownwood collision came a day after six people were killed when a twin-engine Army U-21 collided with a Piper Navajo over the Lake City Ammunition Plant near Independence, Mo.

All four people aboard the civilian plane were employees of Sachs Electric Co. of St. Louis.

Whitney said the cause of the Texas crash will be investigated by a military board.

The officers who parachuted to safety were taken to Brownwood Regional Hospital.

Hospital spokeswoman Cheryl Wilson said First Lt. Richard Dietrich, 28, of Gaithersburg, Md., was listed in good condition with second-degree burns and contusions on his right knee.

First Lt. James R. Johnston II, 24, of West Monroe, La., the other crew member, was taken to the hospital after aiding in the search but was not treated, Wilson said.

Steve Whittenberg, a Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher, said eyewitnesses said they saw three parachutes, one empty, falling to the ground after the 4 p.m. crash.

Kozak's body was found by search crews at about 6 p.m. Wednesday, according to Autrey.

Nancy Garms, who lives about one mile from the crash site, said she heard two planes fly overhead and then heard an explosion.

"I thought one plane exploded," Garms said. "I didn't see a second plane."

UT group settles in court case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Young Conservatives of Texas reached an out-of-court settlement Tuesday of a year-old suit concerning student services fees at the University of Texas.

The Students' Association used to endorse state candidates. UT's student government spent $883.35 in student services fees to buy an advertisement endorsing five Democratic candidates for the 1984 elections.

Money collected through student services fees are considered state money and cannot be used for lobbying or endorsing electoral candidates, Dusek said.

He said the Young Conservatives plan to look at other "questionable activities" of the Students' Association and other student groups, including the student newspaper, to see if fees are being used illegally.
