City official urges use of new photo radar

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A city councilman hopes the city can speed up its crackdown on traffic violators by adopting a photo radar system he says saves lives and is foolproof against radar detectors.

Councilman Ed Harrington said police are evaluating the results of a Jan. 9 test of the new device, which photographs a speeding vehicle's license plate and the driver's face.

The device also registers the speed, time, date and location of the violation.

The device has been used in other Texas cities, but Harrington hopes San Antonio will be the nation's first major city to use it.

"It eliminates high-speed chases and officer-violator confrontations," Harrington said Wednesday. "And one of these systems can do the work of about 15 officers."

Harrington said police officials so far are pleased with the tests and he expects the system to be adopted and placed in wide-scale use by late April.

He said there would be no capital cost because the city would lease the machines from the manufacturer, which would process the film, service the machines and mail out the tickets in exchange for a percentage of the fines.

Harrington said he will propose that any increased revenue from the new device be used exclusively for traffic-safety projects.

He said the city council might have to increase speeding fines to cover the cost of leasing the new equipment.

The city council also might have to change an ordinance so that registered car owners, to whom the tickets would be mailed, would be responsible for speeding violations, he said.

Fernando Flores of the Police Research and Planning Bureau said that in Friendswood, near Houston, the photo radar system has been used for several months and the percentage of convictions has increased.

"The court always rules in favor of the camera," he said.

Judge rejects bid to block Pickens' offer

DALLAS (AP) — A judge Thursday rejected a bid by Diamond Shamrock Corp. to block a $300 million cash offer by an investment group headed by T. Boone Pickens.

In turning down Diamond Shamrock's request for a preliminary injunction, U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer said the Pickens group, known as Partners, had not violated federal securities laws.

Diamond Shamrock, an oil-based company, had attempted to deceive investors about the attractiveness of the offer that expires Feb. 4.

If successful, the tender would give Pickens and his partners nearly 23 percent of Diamond Shamrock's outstanding stock.

Medical officials seek removal of unfit doctors in state hospitals

AUSTIN (AP) — State medical officials are asking the Legislature to help them get rid of unfit doctors in state-operated hospitals.

The State Board of Medical Examiners has been forced to file complaints twice in the past five months against doctors working in hospitals operated by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

Until last month, the Big Spring State Hospital had employed for two years a psychiatrist suffering from Alzheimer's disease who had been fired by the state prison system for patient abuse, the American-Statesman said. He later died of a drug overdose.

In November, the board that licenses Texas doctors revoked the license of a psychiatrist who had been working at the Austin State Hospital despite a felony conviction in Maryland for distributing large amounts of drugs to addicts, the newspaper said.

No Texas law requires state agencies to report incompetent or unfit doctors to the state medical board, and no law requires private hospitals to report such doctors to the board.

"That's part of the problem," said Paul Gavia, chief attorney for the medical examiners board.

The board is asking the Legislature to change state law to require a report to the licensing board if there is any reasonable doubt of a physician's ability, Gavia said.

David Pharis, coordinator of the federal court panel that reviews state mental hospitals for U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said the quality of doctors in hospitals is a real concern.

Pharis said the panel will investigate the quality of hospital doctors this year.

The state medical board filed a complaint against Dr. Harry M. Ricketts, 63, of the Big Spring State Hospital, said he was found guilty from a drug overdose in October.

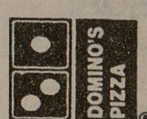

Robert Von Rosenberg, superintendent of Big Spring State Hospital since Jan. 2, said Ricketts was suspended without pay for $59,000-a-year job.

Ricketts was admitted to the hospital's drug abuse unit Dec. 16, a day after he was arrested and died of a drug overdose in a Spring apartment.
