"CELEBRATE BLACK HISTORY"

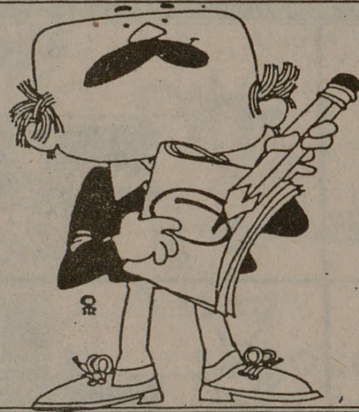

presented by Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

MADAME C.J. WALKER

Madame C.J. Walker believed her secret remedy for Black women's hair came to her in a dream. Upon noticing the loss of her own hair, she created a remedy that she saw in a dream.

The secret formula for black women's hair and her famous straightening comb soon became a booming business. The Walker salons employed thousands and sold a line of cosmetics-business was done "The Walker Way."

She was the former Sarah Breedlove, born on a Louisiana farm and orphaned at 7. After the death of her husband at 20, Madame C.J. Walker moved to Indianapolis and soon became the first black woman millionaire. All of her wealth was left to charities when she died in 1919. She requested that Madame C.J. Walker Manufacturing Company always retain a women president.

Asylum-seekers face varying odds for entry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iranian refugees in the United States have a better-than-ever chance of winning asylum. For Poles, the odds are 50-50. But refugees from El Salvador are approved less than 5 percent of the time, with the other 95 percent facing deportation.

Federal statistics show the disparity, but don't explain it. A dispute over the cause is certain to boil over this year in Congress, when lawmakers take up legislation to grant all Salvadorans a haven for two years.

Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas of El Salvador wrote members of Congress in November 1985 that U.S. officials "have closed their doors and their hearts" to his flock in this country. A number of lawmakers agree, saying asylum approvals would embarrass a friendly government that receives U.S. aid.

The Reagan administration vigorously denies that it is using the asylum program to dole out rewards and punishments based on foreign policy interests.

Asylum is a form of amnesty for foreigners with a legitimate fear of persecution in their own countries. Each case is supposed to be considered on its merits; every applicant is to be given an equal chance.

Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., have introduced bills that would allow all Salvadorans without legal status to remain in this country for two years, while the General Accounting Office studies conditions they would face if sent home.

Moakley, in an admitted effort to pick up votes, included the same relief for Nicaraguans who want to avoid returning to live under the Sandinista government.

The temporary stay is called extended voluntary departure, which allows anyone from a selected country to stay until the status is revoked by the attorney general. Currently, "EVD" applies to those who came here from Afghanistan, Poles who arrived by July 21, 1984, and Ethiopians who came prior to July 1, 1980.

The Refugee Act of 1980 defines refugees as those unwilling or unable to return home because of a "well-founded fear of persecution" on account of race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a social group.

ice our students. Now there are schools, or some part of a school, that may be going after the outside business. When schools have done that it probably infringed on some private business people.

"But in a case where your store or your school is really there to serve that campus community and isn't seeking business outside the campus, I think they're barking up the wrong tree."

Bill Varney, associate vice president for administrative services at the University of Arizona, said, "Arizona State University was manufacturing solar energy kits. You could take a course at Arizona State University in the College of Engineering and learn how to build a solar energy kit on your roof to heat your water. This is what brought the whole bill about."

The catch to the course was that you had to buy the solar energy kit from the College of Engineering and they made the profit off of it, Varney said.

Northern Arizona University's forestry program was doing the same type of thing with log cabins, he said.

Varney said the University of Arizona has a committee that keeps a watch on departments and colleges of the university to make sure programs that may cause problems with private enterprise are avoided.

"I don't think (House Bill) 2148 has been that bad," he said. "A lot of people jump up and down and point to Arizona State and say, 'Look what happened there.' We just have to be careful as administrators and block somebody when they get a bright idea to try and make some extra bucks."

Don Powell, director of business services at Texas A&M, said A&M is not really in competition with local businesses.

"They have their clientele to serve and we have our clientele to serve. We don't try to compete with them. We don't advertise off campus. The only way we advertise is in The Bat- talion or in publications campus. We don't seek a business," he said. "We think it's best for students, best for the faculty, for the staff for us to cooperate these activities here to get the best deal."

The business service doesn't try to pass the cost business onto the students said.

Most local businesses comment on the situation not allowed to comment on company policy.

Allan Black, owner of Allant Theatre, which rents movies and VCRs, said that is in competition with businesses, located on state property staffed by state employees.

Black said he understands auxiliary services on campus receive state funds but the idea that the people doing these services are state employees
