Survey: Texans favors change in speed limit

DALLAS (AP) — A survey of 3,000 Texas American Automobile Association members reveals some drivers would like to see changes in the state's highway laws, including an increase in the speed limit.

Respondents favor a law banning open containers in vehicles and also that truck drivers should pay for part of highway construction costs.

Cathy McDonnell, association spokeswoman, said 3,400 members responded to the survey, which was mailed to 365,000 Texas members.

Members also favored by a 2-1 margin increasing the speed limit on interstate highways, although 51 percent said they oppose the use of radar detectors to avoid speeding tickets.

"That's probably where the law-and-order aspect comes in," said McDonnell. "I'd say your AAA members are basically good citizens."

Almost a quarter of the members answering the survey said they would support a return of the 70-mph speed limit. But 32 percent were in favor of a 65-mph cap.

The U.S. Senate last Wednesday passed a proposal that would raise the speed limit on rural interstate highways to 65 mph.

Members also support mandatory seat belts for school buses and a law requiring motorcycle drivers and passengers to wear helmets, McDonnell said.

The survey results will be used to guide lobbying efforts in the Legislature, McDonnell said.

For the most part, the responses were predictable for an organization whose members have a median age of 45 and an average household income of $46,500, AAA officials said.

Clements: Oil tariff is right move

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan has taken a step in the right direction on the oil import tariff question, Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday while promising to seek Reagan's support for a fee later this month.

Clements said he was encouraged by Reagan's order that Department of Energy officials prepare a policy recommendation on imposing a fee on foreign oil brought into the United States.

For the past year, Reagan has opposed tariff proposals from oil industry officials who say cheap foreign oil is destroying the domestic petroleum industry.

Clements has said he favored an import tariff since oil began its price tumble from $28 per barrel to less than $10 last summer.

"Obviously, the fact that he requested a position paper at least says he has an open mind in this regard," Clements said.
