Davis, Astros $70,000 apart in salary talks

HOUSTON (AP) — Astros first baseman Glenn Davis and the club are $70,000 apart in salary negotiations, and he will not report to spring training without a new contract, according to his agent.

The Astros are believed to have offered Davis $170,000, a raise of $50,000 from his 1986 pay. The $240,000 Davis wants would double his salary, the Houston Chronicle reported Tuesday.

The 25-year-old slugger led the Astros' offense last season with 31 home runs and 101 RBIs.

"We're not asking for a multi-year, multimillion-dollar contract. We're asking for a salary comparable with what other young players with comparable years and comparable statistics have received the last few seasons," Davis' agent Gerry Hunsicker said.

"We're only about $70,000 apart, and it seems to me ridiculous we can't get our differences settled. This can do nothing but hurt both sides. Nobody wins here," he said.

Position players have been asked to report to spring camp by Feb. 25, but are not required to appear under the collective bargaining agreement until March 4. Davis would not become an "official" holdout until that date.

"I don't know who's running his public relations, but it's very early for a player or an agent to talk about a holdout," Astros General Manager Dick Wagner said Tuesday. "The negotiations, as far as I'm concerned, are not stopped."

Wagner said the club paid Davis the highest salary in its history for a first-year man last season and has offered the highest ever for a second-year player this year.

Davis, who has less than two years of major-league service, is not eligible to file for salary arbitration. Players with three years or more in the majors may force arbitration under the collective bargaining agreement.

Hunsicker said Wagner informed him last Friday that the club would not raise its offer on the table at that time and would renew Davis' contract at a lower figure if the player doesn't sign by March 1.

Robinson heads list of honors nominees Indiana's Alford second

NEW YORK (AP) — Center David Robinson of Navy, who leads the nation in blocked shots and is among the leaders in rebounding and scoring, was the top vote-getter in nominations for the Associated Press Player of the Year in college basketball.

In balloting announced Tuesday, Robinson received 558 points and 40 first-place votes from members of the AP's college poll board. Steve Alford of Indiana was second with 370 points and 10 first-place votes.

The other eight nominees are Danny Manning of Kansas, 220 points; Dennis Hopson, Ohio State, 214; Reggie Williams, Georgetown, 180; Kenny Smith, North Carolina, 156; Armon Gilliam, Nevada-Las Vegas, 62; Mark Jackson, St. John's, 32; Ken Norman, Illinois, 28; and Horace Grant, Clemson, 22.

Poll members were asked to vote for five nominees, and the top 10 vote-getters will be placed on a ballot that will decide the 1987 Adolph Rupp Trophy winner for this season. The trophy will be presented at the Final Four in New Orleans on Friday, March 27.

Nominees received 10 points for a first-place vote, 8 for second, 6 for third, 4 for fourth and 2 for fifth.

Last year's winner was center Walter Berry of St. John's, now playing in the NBA with San Antonio.

The 7-foot-1 Robinson, a senior at Navy, had 106 blocked shots through games of Feb. 11, an average of 4.6 per game. The unranked Midshipmen also was third in the nation scoring and rebounding, averaging 29.1 points and 12.1 rebounds per game.

Alford, the senior guard, broke Indiana's career record this season, averaging 23.9 points per game through Feb. 11 and was fifth in the nation in point field goal percentage, 57.9 for the second-ranked Hoosiers.

Manning was averaging 23.9 points per game and was first in the nation in field goal percentage at 64.1. Hopson, a senior forward, was second in the nation in scoring with an average of 29.3.

Kevin Houston of Army led the nation with a 31-point average. He received two points in balloting.

Williams, a senior forward, averages 23.9 points per game. Smith, a senior point guard, missed 1½ weeks of the season because of arthritic knee surgery, averages 17.6 points and assists per game while running the third-ranked North Carolina offense.

Gilliam, a senior forward, is a player for top-ranked UNLV among the leaders in accuracy with a field goal percentage of 60.4 and averages 23.4 points. Jackson, a senior point guard, averages 17.3 points and 6.3

Slaney returns to running after injury rehabilitation

TOKYO (AP) — Mary Decker Slaney, striving to come back after an injury-plagued year, takes her today a step at a time. But in speaking of her future, she has "big ambitions."

The 28-year-old track star, in Japan to run in a relay marathon Sunday, said Tuesday she feels nervous about racing now and still is careful not to push herself, but feels she will be more than ready for the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

"I would like to go to the Olympics, win the Olympics, and run fast," she said. "Lots of people have slower times — they run for what they can be sure of."

"I want to go to win and to run fast — those are my big ambitions," the wiry runner said before demonstrating aerobics on a Japanese television program.

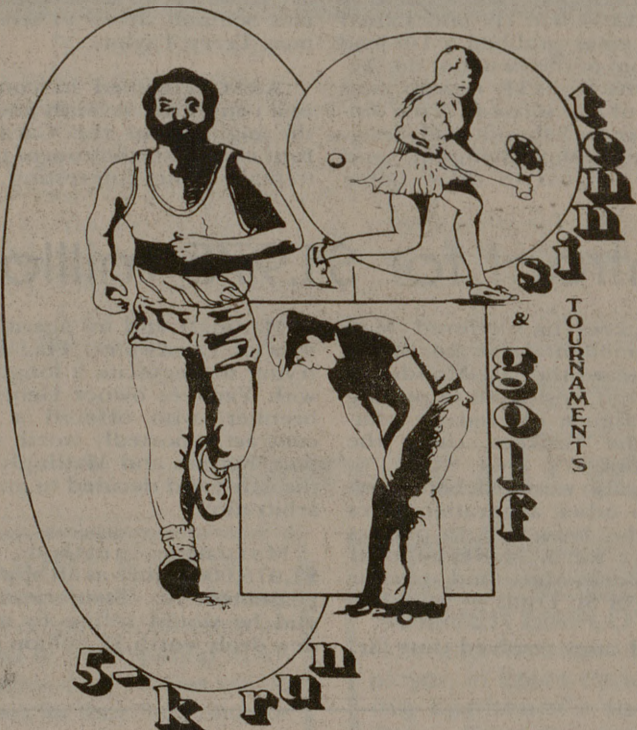

She said she is planning on competing in the Olympics, although "in sports, there are always unforeseen things."

In 1984, her chances for a medal ended dramatically when she became entangled with teen-age South African runner Zola Budd in the 3,000-meter race and fell and injured her leg.

Slaney is the outdoor world record-holder in the mile with a time of 4:16.71 set in 1985. She also holds several world indoor marks, including the 1,500 meters and the mile.

Slaney said she will be ready to return from her 17-month absence from track competition probably in mid-May, but has not decided where she will return.
