Judge strikes down bail-out regulations in Farm Credit System

federal judge Tuesday struck down regulations requiring two solvent Farm Credit districts to use their unallocated reserves to bail out troubled segments of the nation's Farm Credit System.

"We are very pleased," said Blair Hodgkins, vice president and treasurer of the Farm Credit Banks of Texas. "We feel we should give money, but not to the extent to make us broke as well." us broke as well.'

The Texas banks and the Farm Credit Banks of Springfield con-tended their banks would be forced under by the unlimited bailout demands in June 1986 regulations, adding that Congress had not intended for the healthier banks in the system to be bankrupted.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank H. Freedman said, "The court ap-preciates the urgency of the Farm Credit System's fiscal crisis and recognizes that Congress required that strong institutions must make sacrifices to help save the weak.

"But Congress also directed the FCA (Farm Credit Administration) to develop specific, detailed criteria to prevent the 'self-help' mechanism from destroying the financial viability of healthy institutions," he said. "The June regulations . . . do not comply with this direction."

Freedman also found the government had failed to follow proper procedures in devising the regula-tions, and he rejected the govern-ment's claim that the fiscal crisis facing the nation's largest farm lender those transfers.

allowed it to impose the regulations without public comment.

An FCA attorney said he believed the ruling would apply only to Massachusetts and Texas banks and most likely would be appealed.

The government, contending that Congress had precluded the system from seeking federal help until all its own resources were exhausted, maintained that any restrictions on the amount it could take from the unallocated reserves of the wealthier bank districts would hasten the de-mise of troubled banks in the corn and wheat belt.

Ravaged by a farm depression in the Midwest that has dropped land values by as much as 30 percent, the Farm Credit System reported record losses through the first nine months of 1986 of $1.53 billion. Six banks in the Texas and urban development.

Springfield districts have shown continued profits on their loans partly because of rising land values from

Although the banks in the two districts voluntarily have sent nearly $120 million to ailing districts over the past two years, the Texas Bank Cooperatives, the most profitable in the national system, was the only one ordered to send money. The $6.4 million has not been paid, bank officials said.

But the FCA has demanded funds from several of the farmer-controlled associations that own stock in the Springfield and Texas banks and the banks have covered some of

Garbage collectors may be held liable for overloaded trucks

HOUSTON (AP) — Several city much to equip each truck with scales so drivers would know how much st following orders may face traffic their trucks weigh. garbage collectors who say they were just following orders may face traffic fines up to $100 for driving overloaded trucks.

Andrew Oliver, a 52-year-old city garbage truck driver, said he was pulled over last month by a police of-ficer and cited for an overloaded truck.

"The officer said he was not try-ing to mess with me," said Oliver, who has worked 12 years for the city. "He said he was just doing his job. What did they think we were doing? We are doing our job. We have to get this garbage picked up."

But city legal experts say Oliver and at least four others cited for driving overweight trucks in the past seven weeks are personally liable for the offenses and must pay their own

The offenses carry a minimum $100 fine, officials said.

But driver Homer Green said he does not plan on paying up.

"I guess I'll just have to go to jail," "These tickets are against the indi-Green said. "I'm sick of it. We've vidual, not against the city," he said. been picked on too long."

Supervisors tell the drivers to fill their garbage trucks and drive them to the landfill, but police tell them to the landfill the l that if those trucks weigh too much, they will be ticketed.

Officials said it would cost too things."

Some city officials believe the problem may be the result of the Houston Police Department's recent emphasis on traffic enforcement and staff cuts in the garbage collection system.

At least one driver already has been fined $110 on a ticket issued last fall for driving what police said was an overweight truck. Former City Solid Waste Director Charles Ware paid that driver's fine out of his own pocket.

Before he retired last month, Ware was reimbursed by City Controller Lance Lalor. A spokesman for Lalor said the fine was submitted as a necessary expense, and noted it was not a moving violation.

But City Attorney Jerry Smith said the city cannot pay such fines or court costs.

Drivers are getting some help from a former assistant city prosecu-

"I just got fed up," attorney Elijah Lewis said. "This is wrong. The city has instructed them to do these
