Cuomo decides he won't seek Democratic nomination in 1988

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo said Thursday that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988.

"I will not be a candidate," the New York governor said at the end of a call-in show on WCBS radio in New York City.

The 54-year-old governor said that he had "no desire to increase the speculation" about a possible run for the White House.

"This decision is the best thing for my state," Cuomo said, adding that it was also "the best thing for my family" and "the best thing for my party."

Recent nationwide polls had placed Cuomo as a strong second to former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado as the choice among Democrats for his party's nomination.

"In my opinion, the Democratic Party offers a number of candidates who can prove themselves capable of leading this nation toward a more sane, a more progressive and a more humane future," Cuomo said. "I will not add my name to that number."

"I will continue to work as hard as I can to deal with those problems here in New York and to support the selection of our party as vigorously as I can in my role as governor of the state of New York."

"I'm very, very grateful to a lot of people who suggested I might adequately serve as the candidate myself, but the decision I've made, I think, is best for my state, best for my family and also best for my party. And I make this statement now so that no one, no one, will be disappointed by the false expectation of a candidacy on my part."

"There were some people who were disappointed by the false expectation of a candidacy on my part."

Cuomo shied away from throwing his support to any other potential candidate.

"It's kind of early for that," Cuomo said. "I want to see the campaign develop."

U.S. report sees 'troubling trend' in South African police control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department on Thursday called the police crackdown in South Africa the most troubling human rights trend of 1986 and dismissed some of the Soviet Union's newly proclaimed human rights moves as "only talk."

The department's annual report to Congress on human freedoms in 167 countries also criticized South Korea, a close American ally.

But the questions raised about South Korea didn't come close to matching the department's condemnation of North Korea.

Like its predecessors, the 1,356-page human rights survey is a detailed report card on the human condition in lands ranging from the democracies of Western Europe to

North Korea — which Assistant Secretary of State Richard Schifter likened to the regime in George Orwell's classic novel of repression, "1984."

Besides the long-standing problems created by South Africa's racial system, apartheid, the department complained about a state of emergency imposed on June 12, "which has been steadily tightened since then."

"It has been estimated that 20,000 persons were detained under the state of emergency and that 10,000 remained in detention by the end of the year," Schifter said.

The Soviet Union was praised by Schifter for releasing several dissidents from prison last year and for some steps that have "allowed somewhat more breathing space for a great many average Soviet citizens."

"But it is not freedom yet, not by a long shot," Schifter said. He noted that many of the freed prisoners signed admissions of guilt and promises to refrain from anti-government activities.

In South Korea, which received $164.5 million in U.S. assistance last year and is experiencing a growth in anti-government dissent, there were credible reports of mistreatment and torture of prisoners, the department said.

"The use of excessive force by the police continues to be a pervasive and ingrained problem," the report said.

Soviet dissident freed from labor camp

MOSCOW (AP) — Psychiatrist Anatoly Koryagin came home Thursday after five years in a labor camp, and officials said Jewish activist Josef Begun would be out of prison in 24 hours, nearly a week after his release was first announced.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov reported the releases at a news briefing. Koryagin, who had accused authorities of putting sane dissidents in psychiatric hospitals, and Begun were among the most prominent dissidents still held, but other well-known activists remain in prisons or labor camps.

Begun, 55, was still at Chistopol Prison on Thursday.

An Interior Ministry official telephoned Begun's wife Inna on Thursday night and told her to go to the prison, 500 miles east of Moscow, for her husband's release Friday.

"Boris and I will be going to Chistopol as soon as we can get tickets," Inna Begun said. Boris is Begun's son from a previous marriage.

"I was told my husband will be freed tomorrow, in the second half of the day," she told the Associated Press by telephone.

Begun, a teacher of Hebrew, was pardoned Tuesday by a decree of the Supreme Soviet, the nominal national parliament. He was sentenced in 1983 to seven years in prison for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

A Soviet official had announced his release prematurely in a television interview on CBS last Sunday.

Question-answer sessions suspended

Media access to Reagan limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president was meeting with congressional leaders in the Cabinet Room about an arms sale to Saudi Arabia. From the back of the room, a reporter asked him if he thought members of the press should be prosecuted for security leaks.

At another time in the same room, the president was meeting with members of the Senate Finance Committee about a tax bill. Again, a reporter asked a question. This time, it was about the Saudi arms sale.

The two incidents, both last year, represent a type of question-and-answer session that used to occur about once a week at the White House. The last one was Dec. 4.

White House officials decline to say why they have been suspended.

Reporters are free at such sessions to ask questions about whatever is in the news, and the news has been dominated for weeks by the crisis over secret arms sales to Iran, and the apparent diversion of some of the money to help Nicaraguan rebels.

Since Dec. 4, there has been conflicting testimony about whether Reagan approved arms sales in 1985; there have been reports that an investigating board is looking into whether the White House attempted a cover-up; there has been confusion about how active a role Israel played in the sales.

Reporters wishing to question the president about these matters have been limited to shouting their queries at him as he goes to or from Air Force One or his Marine Corps helicopter.

Reagan, who is hard of hearing, often does not respond to such questions. When he does, his on-the-run answer is necessarily brief, sometimes just one word. The reporters have no chance to follow up.

The type of sessions that have been suspended, although also helter-skelter, provide a slightly better chance for reporters to explore a subject.

Sometimes, the president begins the meeting with brief remarks on the open session, then the reporters ask their questions and are shut out of the room.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater responded last Friday. "It's our position on coverage of these events is arbitrary and that's the way it is."

He promised reporters would have increased access to the president, but did not say when.

Meanwhile, the White House is not saying when the president will hold another news conference. The last one was Nov. 19, before the closure that funds had been diverted to the guerrillas in Nicaragua.

2 bodies found 1 still missing after avalanche

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. — More than 250 mountaineers using long poles to probe deep snow across an avalanche recovered two more bodies Thursday and continued searching for at least one more skier, authorities said.

All three victims of Wednesday's snow slide were men, and their bodies were found in an area of the steep slope.

The first body was found Wednesday, less than three hours after the avalanche. The other two were found in 4 to 6 feet of snow Thursday.

"We have developed information that a fourth victim is involved in the slide. We have shifted our emphasis to the other side of the slide," said Summit County Sheriff Delbert Eason. He said the missing man was going with his stepbrother and not with the other victims.

A helicopter dropped explosives to release loose snow that could cause more avalanches. Peak 7, a steep slope north of Breckenridge ski area, became searchers, aided by dogs, before Thursday.

Sixty certified mountaineers and 200 volunteers searched snow Thursday in the Arapago National Forest 65 miles west of Denver.
