Bookstore worker appeals case of indecency to child

By Alan Sembera
Reporter

Attorneys for Billy C. Cornelius, a Texas A&M Bookstore employee who pleaded guilty in January to charges of indecency with a child, filed an appeal Monday in the 85th District Court.

Cornelius, 48, of 503 Dexter Drive, College Station, is charged with fondling a 14-year-old boy while filming him in March 1984.

Defense attorney Travis Bryan III appealed the case on grounds that the warrant used to search Cornelius' apartment on Sept. 27, 1985, was based in part on information gained by an unauthorized entry into Cornelius' home eight days earlier in an unrelated case.

Bryan also said the 10-year sentence given to Cornelius Friday by District Court Judge W.T. McDonald Jr. was harsher than the sentence recommendations agreed to during plea bargaining.

As part of the plea-bargaining agreement, prosecuting attorney Rod Boyles recommended that Cornelius spend six months in prison and then be placed on probation for 10 years. Bryan recommended deferred adjudication. Under the terms of deferred adjudication, if Cornelius is not charged with any new offenses for 10 years, the judge will not find him guilty and the offense will not be part of his record.

At the sentencing hearing Boyles also recommended that Cornelius pay a $5,000 fine, forfeit all his video equipment, and go for psychiatric counseling while on probation.

McDonald sentenced Cornelius to 10 years in prison, but said he would consider granting probation after six months. Bryan wanted a guarantee that his client would be freed in six months, which was not forthcoming from the judge.

The discovery by a Wal-Mart employee of several photographs of nude males that Cornelius later picked up led to Cornelius' arrest. Boyles said the employee's managers alerted police because they believed the subjects were under 17. Police obtained a warrant to search Cornelius' home based on the pictures and the fact that an officer had seen photographic equipment there in another incident.

Court records showed police found video and camera equipment, several videotapes and a number of photo albums containing photos of nude males. Boyles said two of the males whose pictures were in the albums were found to be younger than 17 when the pictures were taken.

Bryan said the search was illegal because none of the photographs found by the Wal-Mart employee contained subjects under 17. He said the warrant also was invalid because the police officer who saw the camera equipment had no right to enter Cornelius' home in the earlier incident.

Prosecutors say the search was valid because they didn't have to prove the males in the photos were under 17 — they only had to have a reasonable suspicion. They also said the unrelated incident of the police officer entering the apartment and seeing the camera equipment was valid because the officer was investigating a stolen auto parked outside the building.

Dallas police officer fired but not indicted for shooting mistake

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer was fired Wednesday after a grand jury declined to indict him for the mistaken shooting of an elderly woman that prompted demands for a congressional investigation.

Officer M.E. Kraus was dismissed one day after a Dallas County grand jury took no action in the Oct. 26 death of Etta Collins, 70, whom Kraus shot twice after answering a burglary call at her house.

Collins, who had called police, was shot after she pointed a gun at officers and did not heed their orders to drop the weapon, investigators said.

"I think there were better options available than to stand or crouch in the middle of the yard," Acting Police Chief Harold Warren said of the officer's action. "One step to the left would have put him out of any line of fire there might have been."

Warren, who said he made the decision to dismiss Kraus after reviewing an internal affairs investigation report, questioned the officer's actions and "felt he should have taken cover" rather than fire.

Investigators initially said Collins was on her front porch during part of the incident, but now say they believe she was at least partially behind her glass front door when the shots were fired, police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

Two Dallas City Council members called for a congressional probe of police practices after Collins' death. They claimed Dallas officers are more likely to shoot first and ask questions later in black sections of town. Collins was black. Kraus is white.

Police officials denied the claims. Congressional hearings have been scheduled for this spring in Dallas, police spokesman Bob Shaw said.

Kraus, 35, was still in the probationary period officers must complete after training with the Dallas Police Department, Warren said.

The officer was fired because his performance during the incident "did not comply with departmental rules and regulations," a police department statement said.

Bush urges alcohol fuels for future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush Wednesday embraced a long-range energy policy, including a switch from gasoline to alcohol-based fuels, to address environmental, economic and national security problems.

Bush said the nation's transportation system will operate almost exclusively on alcohol fuels, either methanol, made from natural gas and coal, or ethanol, distilled from corn and other crops.

"The Environmental Protection Agency has studied for several years the use of alcohols instead of gasoline or diesel fuel as a way of achieving significant reduction in air pollution," Bush said in a letter sent this week to EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas.

"The use of ethanol blends, for example, can produce significant reductions in carbon monoxide," Bush said. "Moreover, expanding commercial fleet use of methanol in cars, diesel trucks and buses could similarly provide significant reduction in ozone and fine particulate matter emissions."
