Meese's adviser, Tower report differ on sales' legality

WASHINGTON (AP) — An in-house adviser to Attorney General Edwin Meese, in an opinion issued shortly after disclosure of the U.S. arms sales to Iran, said the White House did not violate congressional reporting requirements and that an oral go-ahead from President Reagan was sufficient for one of the shipments.

The legal opinions by Assistant Attorney General Charles J. Cooper, which back the Reagan administration's handling of the arms sales, are sharply at odds with the conclusions reached by the Tower commission.

The legal memoranda, prepared for Meese and supplied to the Tower board, were released last week in response to a request from the Associated Press.

One legal opinion by Cooper concludes there was no violation of a requirement under the National Security Act for timely notification of Congress when the administration failed to tell key congressmen about the arms sales.

The Tower report concluded that notification appears to be a requirement. The report says Congress should have been notified shortly after Reagan's Jan. 17, 1986, written authorization for the arms sales failed to gain the expected release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

The administration never did notify Congress, and the deals with Iran didn't become public until last November, about 15 months after the shipments began.

A second opinion by Cooper concludes that it was sufficient legally for Reagan to have given oral authorization for one of the arms shipments that took place in November 1985 involving the CIA.

The Tower panel said it doubted an oral go-ahead was sufficient. Cooper's opinions were written in December of last year, a month and a half after the initial disclosure of the arms sales to Iran and about three weeks after disclosure that some of the profits from the sales may have been diverted to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The opinions, both dated Dec. 17 and drafted at Meese's request, were written amid growing criticism on Capitol Hill that the Reagan administration had broken the law by not informing Congress of the Iran initiative. The CIA's involvement in the November 1985 shipment was emerging publicly in news accounts about the time Cooper's opinions were requested.

The disagreement reflects a longstanding division between Congress and the administration about proper notification.

Study: Violent crime to hit most 12-year-olds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said Sunday that five out of six of today's 12-year-olds will be the victims or intended victims of violent crimes during their lifetimes if current crime rates persist.

Half of them will be victimized more than once, authorities said in a report based on projections from a decade of surveys on the extent of crime.

The report says the lifetime odds of becoming a victim of violent crimes — rape, robbery and assault — decline rapidly with age.

Nearly one out of 12 females will be the victim of an attempted or completed rape. For black females, the odds are 1 out of 9, according to the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The study, based on figures compiled by the government's National Crime Survey from 1975 through 1984, said that 45 percent of black males will become victims of violent crime three or more times — almost double the possibility for black females (24 percent) and triple the likelihood for white females (13 percent). Thirty-seven percent of white males are likely to be victimized three or more times.

The report said that at age 12, 83 percent of all Americans are likely to be hit by violent crime or an attempt at violent crime in their lifetimes. But as they get older, the odds drop even faster than life expectancy.

The report said:

- 72 percent of the nation's 20-year-olds will be victimized by violent crimes or attempted crimes;
- 53 percent of the country's 30-year-olds;
- 36 percent of 40-year-olds;
- 22 percent of 50-year-olds;
- 14 percent of 60-year-olds;
- 8 percent of 70-year-olds.

The bureau publishes crime victimization rates based on twice-a-year interviews with 101,000 persons in 49,000 households. They are asked about their own experiences, including any crimes not reported to the police.

Salvage crews try to find 82 lost aboard capsized ferry

ZEEBRUGGE, Belgium (AP) — Engineers tried Sunday to right a capsized British ferry in an effort to retrieve the bodies of 82 people believed trapped in the half-submerged vessel off the Belgian coast.

Relatives of passengers, meanwhile, went to a makeshift morgue in a basketball court to identify the 53 bodies recovered so far. Of the 543 passengers and crew, 408 survived.

The Herald of Free Enterprise fell on its port side outside this port just 15 minutes after departing Friday night for Dover, England.

On Sunday, two salvage ships carrying giant cranes moved in on the stricken vessel. The unrecovered corpses were presumed trapped or in inaccessible sections.

Salvage crews attached a steel cable to the orange-and-white hull. The operation was suspended at nightfall, after about three hours.

Officials said Sunday it was extremely unlikely that anyone was still alive inside the vessel and that it is too dangerous for divers to try to retrieve bodies before the ferry is righted.

"We cannot get more bodies out of the vessel without killing somebody," said Lt. Stephen Wild, a British Royal Navy diver.

Paul Ellis, a spokesman for the ferry's owners, said, "The prime concern is to get the ship upright. It will be a matter of weeks, rather than days."

He said diving conditions were dangerous. "It's deep, it's dark, everything is upside down and things are moving about."

Raymond Nossent, another Townsend Thoresen spokesman, said the salvage company Smit Tak of Rotterdam intended to right the vessel and tow it back into port.

Belgium and Britain have launched inquiries into the sinking. "We have accepted that it is something to do with the (bow) doors," said a company spokesman in Dover, Paul Ovington. "That is how the water rushed in because there is no other hole in the ship."

Unofficial speculation focused on the possibility that the huge bow doors through which cars and trucks are loaded onto the ferry were left open after departure. Shipping officials in Zeebrugge have said that the doors, which normally are above the waterline, are sometimes left open to clear the area of exhaust fumes.

FBI captures killer 1 year after escape

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Self-styled mountain man Claude Dallas, who escaped from the Idaho State Penitentiary after being convicted of killing two Idaho Fish and Game wardens, has been captured, the FBI said Sunday.

Dallas, who escaped nearly a year ago, had eluded authorities for 16 months before finally being arrested in the 1981 slayings of two Idaho game wardens.

He was put on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list 47 days after fleeing into the northern Nevada desert from a 30-year prison sentence.

Dallas, 36, was convicted of manslaughter in the deaths of Idaho fish and game officers Bill Pogue and Conley Elms, both killed by a rifle bullet to the head after they tried to arrest him for poaching in 1981.

Dallas was the subject of a CBS-TV movie last year, which some critics said romanticized the killer.
